Loyalty Files On Condon Are Refused Thomas Unit

Harriman Says To Obey Subpena Would 'Jeopardize' Entire Program

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Secretary of Commerce Harriman, rejecting a subpena, last night announced his refusal to turn over his department's loyalty board files on Dr. Edward U. Condon to the House Un-American Activities Committee.

He said that he intended instead to ask the President's 20-member Loyalty Review Board to review the case. Condon is director of the National Bureau of Standards, under the Commerce Department.

The House committee had issued a subpena for the files to be presented at 10 a. m. today. But in a letter to Committee Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.), Harriman said he had a legal right to refuse.

If he did not, he said, and handed over "confidential" papers, the entire Government loyalty program would be "seriously jeopardized."

Thomas Sees Ulterior Motive

Thomas promptly issued a statement declaring that Harriman's decision was "definite proof that there is something they don't want Congress and the people to see."

Thomas said that "this is just another example where an agency of the Government is attempting to flaunt Congress—and if they think they are going to get away with it, they are mistaken."

"I am resolved to have a showdown," he snapped.

The New Jersey Republican said his committee was going ahead with public hearings "and we are going to summon, among others, Dr. Condon, Secretary Harriman, and Attorney General Clark."

"Before the Condon hearings are over," he added, "there will be other names of Government officials whose records of Communist affiliation and association will be brought to public attention."

Report Questioned Loyalty

Meantime, Condon, who is director of the National Bureau of Standards of the Commerce Department, himself demanded an investigation. He asked that it be made by the blue-ribbon Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, and take up the whole problem of "public smears on scientists in and out of the Government."

On Monday, a subcommittee of Thomas' investigatory group issued a report casting doubts on Condon's loyalty and discretion. It called him "one of the weakest links" in American atomic security.

Secret Method Found to Preserve Flowers Forever

Paterson, N. J., March 4 (U.P.).—Two brothers, Drs. Philip and Sidney Joffe, today announced the discovery of a secret solution that will preserve freshly-cut flowers forever.

Their process fixes the cell structure of the flowers and preserves its color, form and texture but not its fragrance.

The solution will go on sale at Macy's department store in New York in about four weeks at "a reasonable price."

Any housewife can perform the process.

The brothers said their uncle, Philip Joffe, mixed a formula for preventing paper from aging some time ago. When it failed the uncle, in anger, threw a rose into the solution.

A week later, the brothers noticed that the rose looked as though it had been freshly cut.

Mrs. Lamarre Tells Court of Meyers' 'Gift'

Witness Ignores His Grimaces in Giving Testimony

Mrs. Mildred R. Lamarre, the brunette beauty whose honor was attacked by Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers yesterday took the witness stand to help the Government build a case that could put the retired officer in jail for 10 years.

Meyers' former secretary, Mrs. Lamarre is the wife of Bleriot H. Lamarre, key Government witness. Meyers is charged with causing Lamarre to give perjured testimony to the Senate War Investigating Committee.

The 33-year-old former beauty contest winner told the jury that Meyers once gave her train fare and expenses as "a farewell gift" when she left her job as his secretary and went to California to rejoin her husband.

He Winks at Lawyers

Meyers smirked and winked at his lawyers as Mrs. Lamarre testified that she discovered on the train that he had even arranged to pay for her meals.

Mrs. Lamarre kept her eyes turned carefully away from the defendant and ignored his grimaces and sudden gestures.

She was dressed in a demure black dressmaker suit with a high-necked white blouse, and wore no hat over her long, rippling black bob.

Her voice was low and repeatedly Defense Counsel Robert C. Bushnell protested that he could not hear her testimony and asked that it be repeated.

Due to Continue Today

Mrs. Lamarre was called to the stand shortly before court adjourned and is expected to continue her direct testimony today and Monday.

The Government has not asked her about Meyers' charge that he founded the Aviation Electric Corp. in Dayton, Ohio, to bring her back to Dayton because she was his "girl friend with her husband's knowledge and acquiescence."

Mrs. Lamarre has threatened

Boothe Leads Fight for New Election Law

Move Described as Va.'s Answer to Civil Rights Program

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., March 4.—Delegate Armistead L. Boothe, of Alexandria, took the lead tonight in calling for passage of a new Virginia election law designed as a counter-attack on President Truman's civil rights program.

Boothe was the first speaker in an extraordinary session at the historic State House here.

Sponsors of the bill were led by Delegate E. Blackburn Moore of Clarke, Administration floor leader in the House of Delegates. Martin A. Hutchinson, leader of the anti-organization Democrats, had the opponents. Both sides agreed on a four-hour hearing starting at 8:30 p. m. with two hours for decision.

Hutchinson earlier called the new version "the same bill in a new false face." Earle Lutz, executive director of the State Republican Party, called it a "new low in the substitute for statesmanship for which Virginia once was noted."

The protest that has arisen since Governor Tuck asked the legislature for an answer to the President's civil rights program even prompted a statement from an organization leader in the House of Delegates.

Delegate E. O. McCue, jr., party whip in the House, said he was opposed to any legislation restricting a voter's choice for any office. He said he wanted to make his

4 Gangsters May Forfeit U. S. Paroles

Board to Find Out If It Can Recommit Men for Failure To List All Arrests

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Admitting they had been "a little hasty" in parolling four Capone mobsters, members of the United States Parole Board yesterday agreed to see what could be done about getting the four gangesters back into jail.

Daniel M. Lyons and Fred S. Rogers, members of the three-man Federal Board of Parole, told a House Executive Expenditures Subcommittee they would look into evidence that the men had forfeited their right to parole by false statement concerning their arrest records.

Asserting that "the publicity about this case has not been in the public interest," Rogers said he would not now vote to parole the four.

Seek Ruling on Law

Rogers told the committee that the Parole Board would have to consult the Criminal Division of the Department of Justice to find out if they have a legal right to pop the Chicago hoodlums back behind the bars.

The four are Philip D'Andrea, Louis Campagna, Charles Gioe and Paul Ricca, who were paroled last summer after they served one-third of a 10-year sentence on conspiracy to extort a million dollars from the movie industry. According to the Government the convicted extortionists are heirs of the underworld empire of Al Capone.

May Except D'Andrea

Members of the committee pointed out to the Parole Board members that in their applications for parole at least three of the four had failed to state or required the full record of their arrests and the disposition of the charges. D'Andrea may have answered all questions truthfully, Chairman Clare Hoffman (R., Mich.) said.

The application specifically said that a false answer to this question will disqualify the applicant for a parole.

Under rapid-fire questioning Rogers admitted that:

1. The members of the Parole Board failed to check the application of the prisoners against FBI records.

2. He wasn't sure it was "material" or involved "moral turpitude" even if the prisoners had put down false information on their parole applications.

Arrests Possibly Trivial

Even though the question on the application definitely called for the disposition of any arrest whatever, Rogers said some of the arrests really weren't serious and perhaps the Parole Board wouldn't consider a false answer conceding them a bar to a parole.

Members of the committee pressed Rogers hard over a statement he made to the effect that members of the Parole Board tried to "equalize justice" when persons arrested for the same offenses did not receive the same sentences.

The committee members protested that the Board of Parole was not established to overrule the courts of the land and decide what sentences should be. Rogers maintained the Parole Board tried to equalize things just the same.

"On your theory," commented Hoffman," if one murderer is let out of jail then all other murderers have to be released too."

Denies Political Influence

Rogers denied that there had been any political influence in connection with the paroles of the four thugs.

He said that the fact that Paul Dillon, attorney, who was paid $10,000 for representing the gangsters, was a former campaign manager for President Truman, had not affected the board.

"Why, everybody from St. Louis says he's a close friend of President Truman," said Rogers.

Representative Porter Hardy, jr. (R., W. Va.) shot this question:

"There has been considerable talk of large sums of money being paid to free these men. How much,

U. S. Must Give Military Aid Against Reds or 'Pay in Blood', Wedemeyer Tells Congress

Army Plans Chief Declares Money Isn't Enough; Asks Help for China Now

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

America "will pay in blood" unless it gives military as well as economic aid to nations threatened by communism, Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer said yesterday.

The plans and operations director of the Army General Staff gave this warning to the House Foreign Affairs Committee after urging immediate military aid to China.

"I don't believe dollars alone will stop the spread of Communism anywhere in the world," Wedemeyer testified.

"I predict that if we don't take appropriate steps to stop this Communist conflagration we are going to pay in blood."

Differs With Marshall

Meanwhile, 23 labor, veterans, religious and farm groups wired the committee, protesting against its plan to delay action on the Marshall program and include Chinese, Turkish and Greek aid in one bill with ERP.

Wedemeyer—whose survey on China was suppressed last year by the State Department—declared he apparently had "an honest difference of opinion" with Secretary of State Geeorge C. Marshall on the question of aid to China.

Legislation now before the House committee calls for 570 million dollars in strictly non-military aid for China. Many Republican members of the group favor giving greatly increased military assistance to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's government, to help him defeat Chinese Communist forces.

The GOP majority on the committee, with House majority leadership support, has voted to wrap up Chinese aid and the Greek-Turkish military assistance bill with the European Recovery Program in one omnibus bill.

ERP Action Deferred

Hearing on the latter were concluded last week, and the group is now going ahead with hearings on the China and Greek-Turkey separate bills without acting on ERP. The Senate now is considering the Marshall Plan, having deferred action on the other two measures as less urgent.

Democratic members of the House group have urged daily that ERP be brought separately to the floor, but each day are voted down by the GOP majority.

They feel that passage of the Marshall Plan prior to the Italian elections next month might be the deciding factor in whether Italy goes Communist. Soviet domination of that nation could drag Greece and France into the red camp and doom ERP before it starts.

Former Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson wired Chairman Eaton (R., N. J.) of the House Foreign Affairs Committee last night urging reconsideration of the group's decision.

"Grave and possibly fatal delay appears certain if action on European aid by your Committee must await thoroughgoing consideration of other important and

Another Step Toward Western Unity

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The 16 Marshall Plan nations of western Europe will have wholehearted American approval if they decide to set up a strong, continuing organization for their economic recovery.

The American attitude toward such a 16-nation economic body was finally decided this week, it was learned yesterday, and was cabled to Ambassador Lewis W. Douglas in London in case the Europeans ask him what American policy is.

It forms another part of the developing American effort to encourage the western Europeans to band together for survival. On Wednesday Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett hinted guardedly that the United States might give a military guarantee if the five-nation Brussels conference, which opened yesterday, produced a closer political union.

The cable to Douglas had to do with economic rather than political union and was a forerunner to the economic meeting of the 16 Marshall Plan countries in Paris on March 15.

Much had been said on this side of the Atlantic in favor of a continuing economic organization of the 16, but until this week the Europeans had some reason for wondering where America really stood on this issue.

There were at least two reasons for American hesitation. In the first place, the Government here did not want to seem to be laying down the law or dictating to the Europeans. It wanted to leave the decision to them, just as it did when Secretary Marshall made his first proposal that led to the European Recovery Program.

In the second place, some officials here were afraid that a strong and tightly organized 16-nation body would lead to restrictive trade practices, to the apportioning of markets and to a supercartel. This issue caused a real soul-searching in the State Department and elsewhere before the cable was sent to Douglas.

It has now been decided, with the apparent defeat of those who worried more about cartels than about the present lack of economic integration in Europe. As far as the United States is concerned, the new organization should be powerful enough to look over the shoulders of individual member governments as they develop their economic policies.

If the Europeans now ask Douglas where the United States stands, this in general is what he has been authorized to say:

"We should like to see your organization something real, not a shadow. We think its heart and core should be an international secretariat—a staff of highly qualified men and women drawn from many countries but responsible to none.

"We think this staff should screen the requirements of the individual countries, and should recommend what the individual countries should do in their production and investment programs."

In addition, the United States feels there should be a committee of government representatives, of the highest possible status, to meet periodically and make decisions for the 16. This would be,

Police Force Lags Behind City's Growth

Population Increase Outstrips Protection, Barrett Points Out

By John A. Singerhoff
Post Reporter

Washington's police force has not kept pace with population gains, Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of Metropolitan Police, declared yesterday.

He backed up his statement with these figures:

The Nation's Capital in 1925 had 1199 policemen and an estimated 461,500 residents. Today the city is bulging with 861,000 souls and the Police Department authorized strength is 1795.

For comparison, Barrett's figures show that the population has grown nearly 87 per cent. The personnel of the Police Department has increased a little better than 49 per cent.

Barrett used the present authorized strength figure for his comparison. Had he used the actual number of policemen on the force today—1690—or a 41 per cent increase over 1925, he would have painted an even darker picture.

The police chief pointed out that though his authorized strength is 1795, he is lacking 106 men through military leave, retirements, dismissals, etc

This number, however, will be picked up in the near future when the Civil Service Commission certifies additional rookies, he said.

Barrett told The Washington Post yesterday that only seven foot patrolmen was responsible for 11 beats in the Fifth Precinct last Friday night when two cab drivers were brutally slain by bandits.

In fact, he said, the entire Fifth Precinct, comprising 2.33 square miles and housing an estimated 57,000 persons, had the protection of only 11 men on the street on the 4 p. m. to midnight trick—the time during which the murders took place. In addition to the

5 West Europe Nations Meet To Form Union

Brussels, Belgium, March 4 (U.P.).—Representatives of five western European countries met here today to draw a long-term economic, cultural and military pact.

The conference was expected to lay the cornerstone for the rapidly forming western union of democratic states and to smooth the way for the forthcoming meeting of the 16 Marshall Plan countries.

Representatives of Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg conferred in secret for 90 minutes today.

An official communique noted a "great similarity between the views of the five nations" in regard to the regional accord.

British and Belgian sources said the treaty would contain military clauses providing for joint action against aggression from any quarter and would run for 50 years.

These developments came in other European capitals:

1. Publication in London of an exchange of letters between British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault on the first anniversary of the Dunkerque treaty against German aggression.

Bevin hoped the 50-year military pact could be "extended to cover our other good neighbors."

In reply Bidault said the alliance "answers a permanent need" and promised that France was "ready to cooperate . . . in the establishment of Europe of a democratic regime."

2. Announcement in Paris of plans to create a Franco-Italian customs union.

3. Popular pressure in Scandinavia for a Nordic customs union and closer integration of Scandinavia in western European plans.

4. Official speculation in London that the United States would be

Work-or-Fight Draft Planned If War Comes

Gen. Hershey Warns Senate Unit of Need For Quick Action

Present plans for another war include a universal "work or fight" draft of men, women and children, Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey said yesterday.

The wartime Selective Service head told a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee the armed forces expected to induct men at so rapid a rate that the average of the first 24 months would be greater than the 406,175 monthly peak in World War II. Hershey appeared before the subcommittee seeking restoration of $718,000 cut by the House from 1949 funds for the Office of Selective Records he now holds.

His superdraft statement was in answer to a question by Senator Green (D., R. I.). Hershey said:

"It's a breath-taking idea. We have had almost no experience in trying to control everybody."

"I'm glad you're considering it," Green replied. "I advocated overall mobilization in World War I and World War II."

Chicago, March 4 (AP).—Charges against 79 persons arrested in disturbances at a public housing project were dismissed today when the court was told they had attended lectures on race relations, civil rights and the housing problem.

"I think these lectures were of much more value than punitive action could have been and also that they will prove of real value to the community."

Baltimore Man Beaten, Kidnaped On Busy Street

Baltimore, March 4 (AP).—An unidentified young man was beaten and kidnaped today by three men who drove away at high speed with their victim as more than 20 persons watched.

Police said the man was thrown into the back of the automobile after he was beaten and dragged along the ground on 33d st. near Greenmount ave., a busy north Baltimore shopping center.

Two of the three men in a 1948 or 1947 sedan jumped from the car, bystanders said, when they spotted the young man, hatless and wearing a blue overcoat.

The man started to run, but was overpowered and beaten to the ground.

The incident happened so quickly that none of the spectators were able to come to the assistance of the victim, or supply police with a good description of the three men.

PEOPLE In The NEWS

Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer

Tall, graying General Wedemeyer, a keen diplomat and a keener soldier, abandoned diplomacy and spoke in military bluntness before a House committee yesterday.

Wedemeyer

His observations — urging military aid against Russia —arose from wide international experience gained in 30 years of military service.

His military career actually began with his graduation from West Point 10 days before the end of World War I. He saw its waste and destruction a year later in a tour of European battlefields.

A native of Omaha, Nebr., he entered the military academy in 1914—became a lieutenant general 31 years later.

With Mrs. Wedemeyer, he lives at Fort Myer. They have two sons, one a recent graduate from West Point; the other a college student.

The general, early in World War II, advocated antitank vehicles and self-propelled mounts for high-velocity cannot but had little opportunity to watch these very weapons play a part in victory. After early duty in the Philippines, China and on Corregidor, he served at the Pentagon as chief of the strategy and policy section of the Army's operations division; took part in major Allied strategy conferences.

A former commanding general of the China theater of operations, he was chief of staff to Gen. Chiang Kai-shek. Currently he is director of the plans and operations division of the Army general staff.

Justice Bolitha J. Laws

Laws

A successful practicing attorney before his appointment to the bench in 1938, he is now an aggressive, hardworking and respected jurist who has been honored by local civic and religious organizations for his performance. An ardent golf enthusiast, he also has conducted a men's Bible class of more than 200 members since 1932. He is a past master of his Masonic Lodge and past president of the Worshipful Masters Association.

Justice Laws, 56, is married and has four children. Born in the District, he now lives in nearby Maryland.

He was appointed to the District bench by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, while he was president of the District Bar Association.

In 1943, Justice Laws was named to the United States Emergency Court of Appeals and subsequently received appointment to his present post in 1945.

He is aptly described in the December, 1947, issue of the American Bar Association Journal in the following words:

"Here is a strong man of pleasant personality, at once a scholar and a sportsman; of inexhaustible energy, of complete familiarity with the porcesses and the problems of justice, . . . with a complete sense of independence and courage and impartiality, with superb confidence in the eventual achievements of law, and with a zestful enjoyment of his own participation in it."

U. S. Favors Economic Pact

in effect, a continuation of the Committee for European Economic Cooperation which met at Paris last summer, under the presidency of Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, and approved the first joint economic program ever produced by the western European nations.

The government representatives would not have to meet often, but at least once a year they should approve a report comparable in scale and boldness to the 16-nation report that was the basis of ERP. Such a report would review progress made and would revise production goals and needs as changing circumstances might require.

As the United States sees the problem this country would not be a member of the 16-nation body, although American citizens might be recruited for the international staff. The President's special ambassador, provided for under the pending ERP legislation, would represent this country at the headquarters of the 16 nations but would not vote with it.

The Administration's policy thus conformed closely to the ideas of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, as expressed in the committee's report last week on the ERP bill. The committee felt that the 16-nation body "might well have the responsibility for screening requirements and integrating production and investment programs and should be in a position to make positive proposals to its member governments for raising the productive efficiency of the western European economy."

The instructions to Douglas also expressed a discreet but important American hope that economic union might evolve into closer political union of the free countries of western Europe.

This, too, was in line with the Senate committee's judgment that "closer political and cultural bonds" were implicit in the economic recovery program. It was also in line with a statement made on the floor Wednesday by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg.

"If these things evolve as a result of the economic contracts that are being created, that is another prospect," he said, "and it is one of the happy prospects that it will evolve."

LONDON ENGLAND LEEDS

Here's Why Brown Offers
Washington's Greatest Tailoring Value . . . their new Weaver to Wearer Service

D.C. Firm Buys English Mill, Plans Stepup

By S. Oliver Goodman

A million-dollar purchase of an English woolen mill by a Washington tailoring firm was announced here yesterday.

The 150-year-old Sunderland & Hainsworth, Ltd., mill in Yorkshire will become the property of Louis & Dan Brown, Ltd., of 812-14 14th st. nw., according to Dan Brown, who received word yesterday from his brother Louis, who is in Yorkshire completing final arrangements.

Dan Brown

Louis Brown

Output of the mill, which last year produced $400,000 in fabrics while operating at half-capacity, will be consigned mainly to the United States. An immediate step-up in output is planned. The Brown firm, which operates 30 stores in England in addition to its Washington headquarters store, plans expansion to other major American cities. Stockrooms and offices will be opened in New York City.

Dan and his brother were born in Leeds, England, and came to Washington in 1938, after founding a tailoring business in 1920 in England. Their English representative, associated with the Browns in the mill purchase, is Irvin J. Bentman. Headquarters abroad are in Leeds, England, and the English name of the firm is Servis Tailoring Co., Ltd.

Sunderland & Hainsworth, Ltd., operate 240 looms, and $750,000 changed hands to seal the deal. Final cost is expected to be "in the neighborhood of a million dollars," according to a letter from Louis Brown.

Our recent purchase in Yorkshire, England, of one of its oldest and finest woolen mills, completes the cycle and permits us to announce ourselves as the foremost English tailoring house in America. We are now able to transmit the demands of our customers directly to the looms which operate in a climate unsurpassed the world over for the manufacture of fine woolens. Couple this with the fact that after selecting your material it is fashioned by our staff of unexcelled English tailors. The shops of London can offer nothing finer in materials and skilled workmanship. That's why Louis and Dan Brown can now offer discriminating Washingtonians the maximum in tailoring value.

Men's and Women's Custom Tailored Suits from 85.00. Ready-to-Wear Suits from 60.00.

Once again, in response to many requests, we can offer British woolens of finest quality by the yard.

Czechs Seek Escape Into German Zone

Czech Disappears From Prague

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ADOLF PROCHAZKA, former Minister of Health, is reported to have escaped across the Czechoslovakian border into Germany with his wife, an anti-Communist leader. Their daughter, Milada, 19, was under arrest in Prague

Communist Paper Reports Arrest of Fugitives at Line

Prague, March 4 (U.P.). — The Communist Party press disclosed today that opposition political leaders had started attempts to escape from Czechoslovakia into American-occupied Germany.

Rude Pravo, the chief Communist newspaper, said Bohuslav Deci, National Socialist member of Parliament, was arrested by frontier guards as he attempted to cross the frontier into Bavaria.

Milada Prochazkova, 19, daughter of former Minister of Health Adolf Prochazka, was arrested with her companion, Jiri Wild, 40, near the Bavarian border, Rude Pravo said.

Prochazka and his wife, Helena Kozeluhova, both members of the Catholic People's Party, "also tried to cross the frontier into the American zone of Germany," Rude Pravo said. Without saying exactly what happened in their case, the newspaper added:

"Detailed news of their flight will be published in the near future."

Two Expelled From Party

Two Social Democrats, who fought cooperation with the Communists, were expelled from their party tonight.

The former food minister and former coal miner Vaclav Majer, and Stefan Vilem, secretary general of the party. Majer, a tough, two-fisted man, contested the right of pro-Communists to take over his office during last week's coup. He lost and was patched up in a hospital.

Zdenek Fierlinger, who was ousted in November as Social Democrat leader because of pro-Communist leanings, has now become the party's spokesman. He also is minister of industry.

He disclosed today that elections would probably be postponed until autumn and that there was little likelihood that an "opportunity A likelihood that an "opposition party would be licensed."

"Today all parties have been united into the new national front," said Fierlinger. "There is no opposition."

Action Committees Stay

A spokesman at the presidential castle said President Eduard Benes was "convalescing" at his country estate.

"Therefore he will not return to Prague for some time," the spokesman said. He added that Benes was not seriously ill, but said he could give no further details.

The information ministry also said no foreign newspaper or magazine had been banned from Czechoslovakia recently and that previous announcements to the contrary were erroneous.

"Some progressive western papers such as the Daily Worker and L'Humanite are already on the stands," the spokesman said. "Some others such as Life magazine have appeared again on some stands, but permanent arrangements are still to be made in these cases."

Ex-Envoy Tells Of Angry Call From Prague

Dr. Juraj Slavik, former Czech ambassador, moved from his Takoma Park home to the Shoreham Hotel last night after a brief and angry telephone talk with Deputy Foreign Minister Vladimir Klementis.

When he resigned as Ambassador Wednesday, Slavik roundly denounced the Communist-controlled government of his homeland. That night, he said yesterday, he had a call from Klementis, himself a Communist at Prague.

"Is it true that you have resigned as Ambassador?" asked Klemntis.

"Yes," Slavik replied.

"Do you know what is being said here of you? It is being said you are a characterless betrayer of your country."

"I was acting on my conscience. I cannot work for a Communist government."

"I am finished with you entirely!," shouted Klementis.

"Goodbye," Slavik said.

He and his wife and son, George, spent yesterday moving their belongings from the house, which is owned by Czech government.

"I knew I was through," he said, "when I resigned."

Hunger-Striking Quartet Removed To Island Hospital

New York, March 4 (AP).—Four alleged alien Communists on a hunger strike on Ellis Island are being moved today to the Marine hospital on the island "for medical observation."

The four are Gerhart Eisler, described as the No. 1 Communist in this country; Ferdinand Smith, Negro secretary of the CIO National Maritime Union; John Williamson, Communist Party labor secretary, and Charles Doyle, vice president of the CIO United Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers of America.

The four men, awaiting deportation proceedings, proclaimed a boycott on food Monday in a bid for release on bail pending hearings.

A fifth hunger striker, Irving Potash, was freed in $5000 bail last night after Federal Judge William Bondy held that the Government had failed to show any reason "to question the loyalty of the defendant."

New Ruler of Yemen

Helsinki, March 4 (U.P.).—Finnish officials tonight were reported seeking ways of avoiding a military alliance with Soviet Russia while agreeing to negotiate a treaty of friendship.

An official spokesman of the Finnish foreign office said tonight: "Finland is not likely to give a negative answer to the Soviet proposal to negotiate."

His announcement followed a reliable report that all of the six major political parties had agreed that Finland will have to negotiate some kind of treaty.

The Communist-led Popular Democratic Union and the Swedish People's Party, with a total of 65 of the 200 seats in parliament, favored negotiation of a treaty of friendship and mutual assistance as suggested by Stalin 11 days ago.

The other four parties reportedly favored a friendship treaty, but no military alliance, and reliable sources said the government already was studying a counter-proposal to the Stalin request.

According to these sources, President Juho K. Paasikivi and leading cabinet members have been studying Finnish translations of the 1945 treaty of friendship between France and Russia as a possible basis for any counter-suggestion.

In his personal letter to Paasikivi February 22, Soviet Premier Josef Stalin suggested a "treaty of friendship, cooperation and mutual assistance similar" to his military alliances with the Soviet satellites Romania and Hungary.

The influential Social Democrats, with 49 seats in Parliament, told Paasikivi tonight that Finland "should enter into negotiations with Russia on the basis that our nation will maintain her impartiality. The peace-loving majority of the Finnish people oppose any military alliances and will do their utmost to keep the nation outside any international conflict."

Three right-wing groups—the Conservatives, Liberals and Agrarians—each held lengthy meetings this afternoon and reportedly adopted views similar to those of the Social Democrats.

A revised translation of Stalin's letter showed today he asked for a treaty "similar" to Soviet pacts with Romania and Hungary.

As originally interpreted here, Stalin wanted the Russo-Finnish treaty to be "identical" with his satellite alliances.

This "discovery" kindled the hope among some leaders that Finland might be asked for less commitments than were made by Hungary and Romania.

'Isolate Reds,' Sweden Urged

Stockholm, March 4 (AP).—A Swedish senator called upon his country today to isolate Communists as a fifth column.

Senator Ture Nerman, a leader of the anti-Nazi movement in Sweden during the war, said in the Social Democratic newspaper Aftontidningen it is the duty of the Social Democratic Party "to sever all ties with Stalin's Swedish section and consider them not as Democrats or Leftists, but as mercenary troops of a foreign empire."

The leading Conservative newspaper, Svenska Dagbladet, said it will boycott all news conferences held by the Premier and the foreign minister "as long as Communists are allowed to partake in the delicate discussions on foreign affairs and military preparedness."

In Parliament last night loud laughter greeted a Communist deputy's statement that events in Czechoslovakia were in accord with the will of the Czech people.

The Association of Conservative Students asked stronger Swedish defenses and reconsideration of Sweden's policy of neutrality.

Abdication Forced, Michael Declares

Exiled King of Romania Announces He Will Not Be Bound by Action

London, March 4 (AP).—Michael of Romania declared today his abdication had been forced and he would not be bound by it.

His country, he said, was being ruled by a government "installed and maintained in power by a foreign country."

He made his statement to nearly 100 newspapermen, then went to Southampton to board the Queen Elizabeth which leaves for New York tomorrow.

Michael did not mention Soviet Russia by name.

He arrived in this safe political exile from Paris in time for lunch with Britain's royal family at Buckingham Palace. Then he met the press.

He read a statement, his first on the abdication of December 30. It said in part:

"On the morning of December 30, 1947, Mr. Petru Groza and Gheorghiudej, members of the Romanian cabinet, presented to me the text of the act of abdication, urging me to sign it at once. Both of them came to the royal palace after it had been surrounded by armed detachments, informing me that they would hold me responsible for the bloodshed which will follow as a consequence of the instructions already issued by them in case I shall not sign within the time limit.

"This act was imposed to me by force, by a government installed and maintained in power by a foreign country, a government utterly unrepresentative of the will of the Romanian people.

"This government had violated international pledges binding them to respect the political freedom of the Romanian people, had falsified the elections and annihilated the democratic political leaders who enjoyed the confidence of the country.

"The removal of the monarchy constitutes a new act of violence in the policy of the enslavement of Romania. In these conditions I do not consider myself bound, in any way, by this act imposed upon me."

Former King Speaks Calmly

The handsome 26-year-old exiled monarch spoke calmly in English free of any accent.

His tone was not defiant, though his words here. The manifesto was expected to stir up political anger against him in Romania where the government has power to cut off much of his revenue.

Communist Premier Groza has confiscated his Romanian estates, but promised he would give Michael part of the income. Reports from Bucharest said Michael received an initial settlement of three million dollars and had invested heavily in Swiss and United States securities before his abdication.

(Aboard ship later, Michael said "I am very hopeful of going back to my own country one day.)

His mother, Queen Helen, is accompanying him to the United States. His fiancee, Princess Anne of Bourbon-Parma, is staying behind in an apparent last minute change of plans. (Michael said they plan to marry later in Denmark.)

Romania Reds Present Their Election Slate

Bucharest, Romania, March 4 (AP). The Communist-dominated "Popular Democratic Front" of the government presented today its slate for the March 28 elections.

A manifesto said that, after the constitution is adopted, changes will be made in the administration and in schools. Tax and economic revisions also were promised.

The manifesto promised a continued fight against what it called foreign imperialists. It advocated friendship with all countries, especially Russia.

The election is to choose 414 deputies of the new "first grand national assembly," which will draft the constitution for the Republic.

The former dissident Liberals will participate. The Democratic Party President, Prof. Cheorghe N. Lpup, also may run. Neither party has much chance.

The opposition National Liberals and Independent Socialists will not participate.

All members of the supreme presidium and the cabinet are listed as government candidates. Foreign Minister Ana Pauker, Communist, likely will run in Ploesti.

Greek Rebels May Be Beaten By July, Gen. Livesay Says

Athens, March 4 (U.P.).—Maj. Gen. William G. Livesay, former head of the American military mission to Greece, said on the eve of his departure for the United States that he believed all organized guerilla bands in Greece should be "broken up" by July or August, if the army's offensive develops according to expectations.

His assignment was to spend 135 million dollars in military funds "where they would do the most good," he said. Another 24 million dollars was diverted later to the military from economic aid funds, he added.

Livesay said his mission had been completed, although there is 10 million dollars in reserve.

War Minister George Stratos said today a broad Communist plan for sabotage of Greek installations and "provocative" attacks against the Russian and Yugoslav legation buildings had been uncovered during the roundup of persons suspected of aiding guerillas.

The War Ministry announced that four were killed and six wounded last night when guerillas shelled Naoussa, 42 miles west of Salonika, in a three-hour attack.

British Plan No Cut In Currency Value

Steel Booming

Soviet Output On Increase, Pravda Says

Moscow, March 4 (AP).—Pravda indicated today the Soviet Union is in the midst of an almost unparalleled industrial upswing, revealing startling performance figures for the Soviet steel industry for January and February.

Pig-iron output during January and February was 40 per cent over the same months last year, while steel rose 44 per cent, rolled steel 50 per cent, coke 33 per cent and iron ore 57 per cent, it was said.

Output of the eastern oil fields was reported as nearly 40 per cent over the same period last year, with the planned quota more than fulfilled.

Eastern coal output was reported up 15 per cent over a year ago, and western output up nearly 30 per cent.

Exchequer Chief Denies Change Being Studied

London, March 4 (AP).—Sir Stafford Cripps said today Britain does not intend to cheapen the pound sterling as a way of fighting her economic crisis.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer vigorously denied a widespread rumor of possible joint Anglo-Dutch-Belgian currency devaluation.

Commenting on the final borrowing of the $3,775,000,000 American loan yesterday, Cripps said Britain would now have to sell more of her precious gold reserves to pay for vital imports.

The devaluation rumor sent stock prices up on the Amsterdam exchange and caused brief buying spurts on the London market.

Britain will not solve her chief economic problem—caused by importing much more than she sells abroad—by "monkeying with its currency," Cripps said. Asked if he thought devaluation of the pound was inevitable this year, Cripps snapped:

"No. I certainly do not."

Britain's only hope is to sell more abroad, he said. The chancellor reported Britain's volume of overall industrial production rose 9 per cent last year over 1946.

Treasury experts said Britain would lose far more than she would gain by devaluing—or cheapening—the pound because devaluation would raise the cost of her imports in dollars and reduce prices of her exports.

U. S. to Admit 100 Tailors

The Immigration Service has given the Hickey-Freeman Co. of Rochester, N. Y., a permit to bring 100 tailors into the country—if the company can find them and they can get places in the immigration quotas.

The service waived the law against importing contract labor after an inquiry that showed there was a shortage of skilled tailors in this country, as the Hickey-Freeman Co. claimed. The company's plea for the permit was filed last October and was backed by Rochester city officials, by the clothing workers' union and by Representative Kenneth B. Keating (R., N. Y.).

The permit merely lifts the ban on contract labor, under a policy that the Justice Department said yesterday has been in force for 30 years. It does not provide for places in the quotas for the tailors, or their families.

The department said the tailors might come from Canada, or elsewhere in the Western hemisphere, or from England, Ireland or Germany. They must be in this country by August 20, under the terms of the permit.

Department officials thought it possible that some of the tailors might be displaced persons.

Gold Coast Asks Self Rule

London, March 4 (AP).—Two West African groups demanded today that Britain's Gold Coast colony be granted immediate self government. During the past few days the colony has been swept by riots in which 23 persons were reported killed.

A joint statement by the West African Student's Union and the West African National Secretariat contained the demand for self government.

The statement accused police of firing on "unarmed and defenseless men."

The British sloops Actaeon and Nereide are steaming toward Accra, the Gold Coast capital, from South Africa.

The Colonial Office said quiet has been restored.

A British government statement in Commons attributed the rioting to Communist incitement.

This charge "was entirely false and completely misleading" said K.A.B. Jones Quartey, editor of the West African Student's Union magazine.

According to the Colonial Office, the disorders were touched off when the Former Servicemen's Union, a minority group of veterans, converged on the residence of the governor, Sir Gerald Creasy, to present a petition. The nature of the petition has not been disclosed. Shots were fired after police attempted to divert or stop the rioters.

[The United Press said British authorities today imposed censorship on news dispatches from the Gold Coast.]

Ban on Red Trade In Aid Bill Urged

A long-expected move developed in the Senate yesterday to prevent the 16 Marshall Plan countries from trading with Russia or her eastern European satellites.

It came from Senator Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebraska and others of the so-called "revisionist" group of 15 Senators, who have so far monopolized the opposition to the European recovery bill.

What bothered Wherry was the thought that Britain, France and other western countries might take advantage of American help to export their own manufactures east of the "iron curtain."

Wherry argued that ERP would simply strengthen Communism if it permitted the industrial products of a revived western Europe to flow eastward within two or three years. He thought Congress should write strict conditions into the bill to prohibit such trade, although he did not offer his proposal as an amendment.

Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.) thought each of the 16 countries should be put "under contract" not to deal in any way with Russia, and Senator Arthur V. Watkins (R., Utah) suggested that Britain might have to be asked to abrogate her existing trade agreement with the Soviet Union.

The bill as approved by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee contemplates a great increase in east-west European trade, but leaves it to the administrator to cut off American aid whenever it is used for purposes contrary to the spirit of the program. The program contemplates that recipient countries may not reexport goods directly provided by the United States, although they are free to export almost anything processed from such goods.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.) pleaded for leaving discretion in these matters to the administrator, and for writing any necessary conditions into the bilateral agreements to be made with the 16 countries. He spoke of the effect of the Neutrality Act in tying the Administration's hands when war came.

"There is no more imprudent thing the Senate could do," he said, "then to tie our hands with respect to particular countries now.

"You are never going to get western Europe off our necks unless it gets the things it needs from eastern Europe. At the same time, you must not send a nickel's worth east of the iron curtain that would strengthen and build up communism.

"The idea that there must be no trade between eastern and western Europe means that we will have to go on supporting western Europe for the rest of our natural lives."

Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.) recalled that the whole purpose of ERP was to restore the western Eurpeon countries and "let them resume their normal business transactions."

"Even if they sold something to Russia, terrible as it might be—although we've been doing it ourselves for a long time—the nation selling the goods will get in return something it needed a lot more than what it was supplying," Connally said. "I think it's a good thing to let them trade with eastern Europe, because one of the best ways to break down the iron curtain is to trade across it."

There were only two set speeches in the ERP debate yesterday, both of them continually interrupted by questions and both delivered to an almost empty Senate. At one time there were only seven Senators on the floor.

Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.), a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said American help would be wasted if it simply helped to maintain "an obsolete European structure which has been the cause of two world wars within 25 years." He saw "a gleam of hope in the amazing accomplishment of the Paris conference, where these divided peoples have adopted goals for their respective accomplishments as conditions of their further aid from us."

He thought the people of the United States as well as Europe must pull themselves together, for he said, "our inability through selfish division at home to aid in the rehabilitation of Europe at this critical moment will be the signal for communism to move in and take over."

Senator George W. Malone (R., Nev.) launched a bitter attack on recent American foreign policy. Instead of continuing "a hodge-podge of executive orders and gifts of large sums of money to foreign nations," he said the United States should decide what nations in Europe and Asia it needs to protect and then announce to the world that any threat to them "will be considered an overt act against the United States."

He said a precedent for such action existed in the Monroe Doctrine. He had not finished his speech when the debate was adjourned until today.

22 Parties To Compete In Rome

Rome, March 4 (NYHT).—Twenty-two political parties and coalitions of parties announced today they will compete in the Rome area during Italy's nation-wide elections on April 18.

The announcement was received as bad news tonight by anti-Communists. They pointed out the Communists have formed a strong alliance but anti-Communists groups are split into more than a dozen factions. Even if Communists and their allies get only one-third of the votes they may be the largest single party and obtain the right to form a new government.

The selection of a party to form Italy's new government will be made by the Italian President a few days after Italy's new Parliament holds its first meeting on May 8.

Today was the deadline for entering candidates.

One well-informed source estimated the Communists and allies will get between 30 and 35 per cent of the vote, the Catholic Party about the same, the non-Fascist right wing coalition 8 per cent, the anti-Communist wing of Socialism 6 per cent, the mildly leftist Republican Party 6 per cent, the Monarchists 4 per cent and the unconverted Fascists 3 per cent.

'Big 3' Seek to Reduce Red Claims on Austria

London, March 4 (AP).—The foreign ministers' deputies of Britain France and the United States, meeting with Russian deputies in London, today decided to try to persuade Russia to reduce its price for an Austrian peace settlement.

The western deputies suggested a possible compromise on Russia's claim on Austria for $200,000,000 within two years, two-thirds of Austria's oil production and control of the Danube shipping company.

The Russian delegation did not give an answer.

Parley on West Germany May Conclude Today

London, March 4 (NYHT.).—The six-nation closed-door conference on the future of western Germany will end tomorrow night or Saturday.

It is believed Britain has agreed to go along with a three-power control system over the Ruhr.

Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, which participated along with Britain, the United States and France, have agreed that for the time being their role in the Ruhr will be as observers with the right to make suggestions and ask questions.

17 Jews Die In Haganah Unit Ambush

Jerusalem, March 4 (AP).—Seventeen Jewish militiamen were killed today when a Haganah road patrol was ambushed and wiped out in Arab territory north of Jerusalem.

[The United Press said it learned the patrol had 23 members and that 6 who escaped the ambush said the Arabs captured 17 Jews alive but killed their prisoners when they saw British forces approaching.]

The patrol was shot up in a two-hour battle a few miles north of Kalandiya Airport. Known Arab casualties were two wounded. A second Jewish force, estimated to number 25 men, was either driven off or escaped.

The ambush was sprung by perhaps 200 Arabs deployed in the hills. Haganah sources said the Arabs killed 12 of the Jews during the battle and took the five others to Ramallah, where they were shot.

A reliable source in Haifa said British officials and families awaiting transportation to England were moved from Haifa to Jenin in an Arab area of Palestine because of fear of possible Jewish attacks.

[The six members of the United Nations Palestine Commission technical staff met H. L. G. Gurney, chief secretary of the Palestine government, and he promised "full cooperation," the United Press said.]

The unofficial death toll in Palestine since the United Nations voted for partition November 29 rose to 1590.

U. S. Insists Palestine Vote Be Taken Soon

Lake Success, March 4 (AP).—United States officials insisted tonight that the United Nations Security Council vote soon on indorsing partition of Palestine.

The first test ballot in the Council may come tomorrow.

In the face of almost certain defeat, the United States was said authoritatively to be standing behind its pending resolution. Chief American Delegate Warren R. Austin says a vote for this measure is a vote for partition.

Delegates who opposed Austin say this is not the time to vote on the partition plan itself. They say conciliation moves must come first.

A spokesman for Austin said this country would not accept a compromise on the United States resolution.

Austin proposed last week a resolution which called for the Council to accept the plan approved last November 29 by the U. N. Assembly to divide Palestine into Jewish and Arab countries.

This resolution also proposed the Council set up a committee of the Five Great Powers—France, Britain, the United States, Russia and China—to consult with Jews and Arabs in an effort to reach a peaceful settlement.

Andrei A. Gromyko of Russia favored the partition part, but did not think a formal committee necessary for consultations.

The United States, on the basis of declared positions taken by five delegates, cannot obtain the required majority of 7 members in the 11-nation Council.

Condon Files Are Refused

sponded by announcing that on February 24 its loyalty board had unanimously found Condon to be loyal. Thereupon Thomas ordered a subpena to be issued for the loyalty board's files.

In last night's letter to Thomas, Harriman said he concurred with the department loyalty board's clearance of Condon. He added that because of public interest in the matter, he intended to ask the President's Loyalty Review Board to review the whole case. He said he would turn over all the relevant papers to that body when it undertakes the review.

But is would be "prejudicial to the public interest," Harriman said to turn the file over to the House committee. It contains confidential reports from other Government agencies, and the names of people who gave information on the promise that their action would not be disclosed, he said.

"It is also necessary to consider the effect which release of this file might have on the success of the (over-all Government) loyalty program," Harriman wrote.

"If a precedent were to be set by releasing such a file it would be difficult, if not impossible, to assure persons from whom information is obtained in future cases . . . that they can rely on the Government to protect the confidential nature or source of the information.

"As a consequence, many persons would be reluctant to give informaton, the discovery of disloyal persons would be made more difficult, and the effectiveness of the Government's loyalty program seriously jeopardized."

Harriman told Thomas that release of the file would even "gravely prejudice" the "very objectives which your own committee has been pursuing."

His legal right in refusing to carry out the dictates of the subpoena, Harriman explained, is long established. He said Attorney General Clark advised that his position conforms to the law and is proper.

The rule of nondisclosure, he went on, dates from the time of Washington and is traditional under the concept of separation of legislative and executive powers. He quoted an opinion to this effect of Attorney General Jackson in 1941.

Harriman said he had instructed the secretary of the Department's loyalty board, John L. Towne, to appear before the committee this morning but "respectfully to decline to testify concerning the subject matter of the subpoena."

How the Un-American Activities Committee will respond to the Commerce Department's refusal is not known. Chairman Thomas is clearly anxious to press the investigation to the limit and is fortified by what amounts to a vote of confidence by the House leadership.

For earlier this week, the Committee on House Administration approved Thomas' request for a $200,000 appropriation for the rest of this year. This is double what Thomas' group received last year.

Condon's own request for an investigation was made in leters from him to Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), chairman of the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee, and to each of its members.

He wrote that the Thomas Subcommittee had made "insinuations about my loyalty and charges of untrustworthiness," but that it was not that issue which concerned him.

Rather, he said, he was worried about "the national weakness and disintegration of our scientific position." He said scientists were under "a mounting tension of threats of purges, spy-ring exposures, publicity attacks and sudden dismissals without hearings."

He asked for "a complete hearing and careful study" of the relationship between "scientists and their Government." As a result, he hoped, there would be a "restoring of conditions in which men of intelligence will be willing to work for their Government and will not be constantly harassed and harried by irresponsible attacks on their character."

Church Got Money, Fraud Suspect Says

$58,734 Netted in Puzzle Contest Went Into Building Fund, 'Chancellor' Declares

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

Harrison Parker—cited for a quarter-million dollar mail fraud—claimed yesterday he was just raising money for his church.

Parker said he didn't take a dime of the cash that poured in to The Puritan Church during the four-month puzzle contest that brought the fraud charge. He said that as chancellor and head of the church he got $40 a week for expenses and that was all.

As for the puzzle money, Parker said that after paying all the contest cost—which was over $160,000—there was $58,734.11 put away in the Puritan building fund where nobody but the trustees of the church can draw it out. The trustees are his wife and sister.

Postal officials have asked for a fraud order against Parker, and mail sent to him and his church at La Grange, Ill., is being held up until there's a ruling. The 71-year-old chancellor took the stand yesterday to deny the charges before Trial Examiner Daniel J. Kelly.

Attorney William C. O'Brien charged that all there was to the Puritan Church was Parker himself and some of his family.

Parker swore that this was far from the fact, that besides his wife—Mrs. Edith S. Parker of Los Angeles—and his sister—Mrs. Viggo E. Byrd of Cos Cob, Conn.—there are thousands of members, three or four thousand anyway. He said he had spoken to as many as 100 people in La Grange. When asked, Parker said he could not remember the names of any members, except the late Dr. Robert Perry Shepherd and Dr. Scott Baldwin.

Parker said, too that the Puritan Church is nearly 300 years old and has been a tradition in his family for 10 generations. The eldest Parker always has been chancellor, he said, and he rose to the office in 1939 upon the death of one of his sisters. At one time, he said, he was Ecumenical Patriach of the church, but he does not know who holds that office now.

The Post Office Department says Parker's puzzle contest was a racket. Ads in magazines and papers offered a $250 prize and several other prizes for lists of the names on a crude map in which certain letters were used. Parker said the department claim that the puzzle was easy was wrong, because 25 per cent of the answers he got were wrong.

Those who sent in answers were invited to get in on another contest—this time for a $3500 top prize—by giving up to $12 to the Puritan Church building fund. The department claims that these gifts made up the nearly a quarter-million dollars the contest took in. The prizes paid out will come to $6000 or $7000.

Parker said it was J. L. Stewart, who runs an advertising agency in Chicago, who thought of using the puzzle contest to raise money to build the Puritan Church. Placed in evidence was a contract by which the agency would get 26 2/3 per cent of the net profit on the first contest and one third of the net on all others for five years.

Besides placing the puzzle ads in some magazines and newspapers, Parker said the Stewart agency put ads in other papers, which were straight appeals for gifts to the Puritan Church. This came out when Parker was shown a full-page ad placed by the Stewart agency in The Washington Post last Tuesday morning. Parker added that as chancellor he was of course responsible for every thing his church did, and that he authorized placing the ads.

And where did the money for the ads come from? Parker said doubtless out of the church funds, which were built up by gifts and the sale of lessons for $2 a month. These buyers he called "communicants," saying there were 25,000 of them and that the take from the sale of lessons had run as high as $6000 a month. In some months, he said, the church spent as much as $14,000 advertising lessons. He said the church gave Bibles away free—2500 in a year—and the lesons were free to anyone who could not pay for them.

Parker told the trial examiner he had been business manager and president of the newspaper Chicago American, business manager of the Philadelphia North American and business manager of the Chicago Tribune. But he had been feuding with the Tribune for years. In a statement placed in evidence yesterday Parker charged that he had "been jailed five times, by Robert R. McCormick's crooked coalition judges."

Some weeks ago, Parker argued his own appeal in the Supreme Court from two jail sentences given him in Chicago for contempt of court. These grew, in part, out of his charge that the Tribune company beat Illinois out of 100 million dollars in taxes.

Supplies Shrinking

President For Disaster Relief Study

President Truman yesterday approved Federal consideration of a permanent program of disaster relief using surplus medicines and equipment.

He was advised by Federal Works Administrator Philip B. Fleming that wartime stocks of medicine, blankets, clothing and other such supplies were "shrinking steadily." When they are gone, Fleming wrote, the Nation "again may be ill-prepared to aid stricken areas in an hour of need unless we have adopted a sound program of mobilization for disaster."

The matter had long been on his mind, Mr. Truman replied, adding that "We should now give consideration to making a permanent arrangement for disaster relief."

Labor-FSA Budget Cut To Be Asked

By Jerry Klutz
Post Reporter

Substantial cuts are due in the Labor-Federal Security budget which will be reported to the House today by its Appropriations Committee.

The bill, however, won't carry funds for the United States Employment Service, the Veterans Employment Service, Social Security functions, and the office of the Federal Security administrator.

Representative Frank Keefe (R., Wis.), chairman of the subcommittee handling the bill, explained these agencies will be provided for in a later bill. He pointed out that the employment services and Social Security are involved in the President's latest reorganization plan approved 8 to 4 yesterday by the Senate Labor Committee.

A budget for those agencies won't be recommended to the House until after Congress takes final action on the reorganization plan. That plan would transfer permanently both USES and the Bureau of Unemployment Compensation to the Labor Department. Keefe said the FSA administrator's office is being reorganized and that his subcommittee will wait until it is completed before he approves a budget for it.

The chairman hinted the bill would recapture about 2 million dollars in appropriations voted last year. He indicated both Labor and FSA would have a surplus "despite the howls heard last year when we cut their budgets."

It is reported that the President's budget for personnel in Labor, FSA, and the National Labor Relations Board will be cut.

Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) yesterday came out in favor of a drastic overhauling of the Classification Act that fixes the salaries of 800,000 Federal workers.

In a letter to President Harry B. Mitchell of the Civil Service Commission, the Senate Civil Service Committee member asked that he be supplied promptly with this data:.

1. A rough draft of language that would iron out the inequalities in the act.

2. A revision of pay schedules that would raise Federal salaries equal to an average of $500 per employe.

Flanders also would raise the $10,000 ceiling on the act to $12,500. He would give postal employes an increase of a flat amount, but he favors a percentage increase for Classification Act people that would fit into a revision of that measure.

Meantime, 39 additional House members yesterday appeared before the House Civil Service Committee to indorse pay raises for Federal workers. More than 125 members have themselves on record supporting pay raises.

Red Cross May Hit 20% of Goal Today

Greater Washington Red Cross campaigners hope to report 20 per cent of their $1,080,000 goal at their second report meeting today.

"We intend to keep pace with last year," a 1948 campaign spokesman said yesterday—a pace admittedly tough since last year's $787,560 goal was oversubscribed by 161.7 per cent, one official pointed out.

Today's meeting, at 12:30 p. m. in the Chamber of Commerce building, 1615 H st. nw., is expected to draw more than 500 volunteer solicitors from six of the nine units. Alexandria, Montgomery and Prince Georges' divisions will not present reports, they said yesterday, because they are behind schedule due to bad weather and muddy roads.

In an effort to step up larger gift contributions, Robert Woods Bliss, chairman of the special gifts division, called in his 12 committee chairmen yesterday afternoon for an informal conference. More than 500 prospective "big" contributors must be approached before the division's final progress report meeting Tuesday, the Red Cross reported.

Secretary of State George C. Marshall will explain American Red Cross objectives over an American Broadcasting Co. coast-to-coast network at 2 p. m. tomorrow. His talk, which will precede the Metropolitan Opera's presentation of "Tannhauser," with Helen Traubel and Lauritz Melchior, will highlight the annual "Red Cross Day at the Metropolitan."

Rallies scheduled by local business and Government groups today and tomorrow are:

Today

The Hahn Shoe Store, 7th and K sts. nw.; Mrs. Mary Lee Schaeffer, speakers' bureau, will describe ARC services to veterans and men in the armed forces, 9 a. m.

Dunbar High School, 1st st. between N and O sts. nw.; Mrs. Willard P. Bond, speakers' bureau, will speak on the ARC blood-bank program, 9 a. m.

15 Surplus P-51 Planes Sold to France by U. S.

The State Department, announcing this yesterday, said the sale price was $157,467 and the planes' original cost $787,335.

The P-51 is a single-engined fighter which figured in American air victories in the later stages of World War II.

Other transfers listed included the sale of 50 demilitarized tank landing ships to China. These were among craft at Subic Bay in the Philippines. The original cost was $80,890,000 and China agreed to pay $1,400,000.

footman, he asserted, there were four privates in two scout cars.

"I've asked the Commissioners to ask Congress for 205 additional men," Barrett said. "If I get them, the majority will be put on the street as patrolmen.

"That's what we need—more [illegible]."

He drew a comparison between the number of footmen on the beat today with the number in 1925. There was one footman for every 891 persons, he said. "There's only one footman today for every 2091 persons.

"We've lost personal contact with the people," he said. "The man on the beat knows what goes on in his district; he spots strange faces and abandoned stolen cars. Citizens and business men become acquainted with the footman, and give him information. That's the way to keep crime down and solve those which are committed.

Tips from citizens led to the arrest of the two town brothers accused in the cab murders.

"Scout cars are for emergency work. They are indispensable. But men riding through a neighborhood can't keep check on what goes on like a man coming personally in contact with police problems."

Barrett said that each precinct is seriously handicapped daily by excessive numbers of special details and chores which he feels are not police work at all.

For instance, he said, policemen last year had to "investigate" 34,000 dog licenses in the District.

He has 34 policemen detailed to checking licenses only, he said. Their task is to ascertain that business places have proper permits, occupancy licenses, etc. He said this work should be done by a crew of men under the supervision of the District Licensing Office—"like Health Officers and ABC Officers."

Barrett disclosed that last year his men put in 132,538 man hours on special details. These included parades, visiting celebrities, police protection for places of amusement and recreation and details to guard the President.

This represented, he said, the loss of an average of 80 men per day.

Barrett said he would like 205 additional men and also an increased number of officers.

"I would like to have an assistant superintendent and an inspector on all hours of the night. Now "headquarters," the administrative offices, closes at 5 p. m. We should have a responsible staff here all night."

City Heads Approve New Court Formula

Payment for Structure Would Extend 25 Years, Amount to About 7 Million

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Payments for the District's share of the long-delayed Federal Courts building here would be extended over a 25-year period under a formula approved by the Commissioners yesterday.

Approval was announced following a conference between a delegation of Federal justices, Board of Trade leaders and city officials.

During the past 10 years of efforts to obtain a new District Court, the costs of such a building have mounted considerably. But the needs have increased at even a greater rate, District Court Chief Justice Bolitha J. Laws indicated yesterday.

While officials refused to comment on costs, it is unofficially estimated that the entire project, including the building and land, will amount to about $18,600,000.

This compares with 1945 estimates of $10,300,000 for the building plus $2,420,000 for the land.

In other words, on the basis of the unofficial estimate, the cash cost to the District now would be nearly seven million dollars, compared to about four million dollars in 1945. The Federal Government's share would be similarly increased.

Site of the proposed building would be the area bounded by Constitution ave., John Marshall pl. and 3d and C sts. nw. The Fine Arts Commission has approved a model of the building, with a plan to have it front on Marshall pl.

After conferring with Commissioner Guy Mason and Assistant Engineer Commissioner Col. L. E. Cox, Chief Justice Laws told reporters that he postponed a District Court case yesterday 10 days for lack of a courtroom.

The payment formula was previously approved by the Washington Board of Trade, and Board President John A. Reilly and former President Robert V. Fleming participated in the discussion of it yesterday.

Under the plan, the District would pay 50 per cent of the total cost of the court building and site (which the District owns over a period of 25 years, and the District would receive full credit for the land valuation.

District officials said this had the same net effect as the previous formula, except to give the District a longer time for payment. Under the previous formula, the District's share was to be paid in 1010 yearly instalments.

Congress already has appropriated $370,000 to plan the proposed building. It was estimated yesterday that with prompt by Congress, the court would be ready for occupancy within three years, after which the first District payment would be due.

A committee composed of Chief Justice Laws, Chief Justice Harold M. Stephens of the United States Court of Appeals, Associate Justice James M. Proctor of the United States Court of Appeals, Commissioner Gordon R. Young, Public Buildings Commissioner W. E. Reynolds and Capitol Architect David Lynn will meet Monday to prepare a report on the building's cost and request congressional authorization for it.

Pared Budget Restorations Voted Down

By Samuel W. Bell

The House voted down yesterday all prospects to restore budget cuts in appropriations for the State, Justice and Commerce Departments for the next fiscal year, but delayed until today passage of the bill embodying the funds.

The postponement was caused by a row over whether Communists held posts in the State Department.

Representative Clarence Cannon of Missouri, ranking Democratic member of the Appropriations Committee, accused the House Republican leadership of failure to meet the Communist issue head-on. His remarks led to a protracted debate in which Representative John Taber (R., N. Y.), chairman of the committee, told the House that "at least 14 Communists continued to work for the State Department," despite the inquiry conducted by the loyalty board appointed by President Truman.

Representative Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.), chairman of the loyalty subcommittee of the House Expenditures Committee, asserted that his group had information with respect to "Communism" in the State Department, which, if disclosed, would be "shocking."

Adhering to the policy followed in the current session in support of budget cuts made by its Appropriations Committee, the House beat back all attempts to restore cuts by which the committee had reduced the budgets of the three departments by $84,500,000.

By successive teller votes, the House refused to increase the funds for the State Department's budget by four million dollars for salaries and by $2,165,830 for the foreign service.

The House also refused to increase the 28 million dollars provided for the propaganda activities of the "Voice of America," for which the Administration had recommended $34,387,000.

Aid Offered In Courtesy Nominations

Nomination of motorists for awards in the current courtesy contest is going to be made easier.

The District Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Committee and the Department of Vehicles and Traffic announced yesterday they would assist persons wishing to nominate motorists in the contest sponsored by the Board of Trade's Greater National Capital Committee.

Traffic Director George E. Keneipp said, "if persons send the car's license number and description of the act to us we'll look up the name and address of the car owner and forward the entry to the contest committee."

Entries should include auto license number of the courteous driver, name and address of person making submission, location and time of act, and complete description.

Entries should be sent to Public Relations Division, Department of Vehicles and Traffic, Room 1008, Municipal Center, and should be postmarked not later than March 17.

The Greater National Capital Committee's contest is not limited to motorists, and nominations may be sent to The Courtesy Editor, The Washington Post.

Mobsters May Lose Paroles

if any, got into the hands of parole board members?"

"Not a cent," said Rogers. "Of course," he added, "I am speaking for myself, but I have confidence enough in my associates to say the same is true of them."

Lyons was not a member of the board when the paroles were granted.

Friendships Didn't Help

Peyton Ford, assistant attorney general, also denied before the subcommittee yesterday that political friendships had aided the gangsters.

He said a second indictment against the four would have been quashed even if Maury Hughes, a Dallas, Tex., attorney, and lifelong friend of Attorney General Tom Clark, had not been paid $15,000 for obtaining dismissal of the mail fraud indictment. The dismissal paved the way for the paroles, Hughes said.

Ford said he talked with Hughes about the case but Hughes' intervention had no effect. The case would have been dropped anyway since the men were in jail, Ford declared.

School Referendum Bill Favored in Va.

House Passes Plan for November Vote On State Assuming Educational Costs

Richmond, Va., March 4 (AP).—The House of Delegates passed a bill today, 72 to 15, to call a referendum in November of the question: Shall the State assume the entire cost of the school system, while the localities maintain only the grounds and buildings?

The House overrode an attempt to couple the question with another one: Shall the State impose a 5 per cent sales tax to pay for State financing of schools?

It accepted an amendment eliminating from the question any reference as to whether State control would accompany State financing and defeated every move to enlarge the question.

The Senate now receives the measure and its passage would make the November elections, already heavy with important issues, one of the most meaningful in recent Virginia history.

Full Day of Action

The late House action climaxed a day full of important action:

1. The House Finance Committee refused to report the Yates 2 per cent sales tax bill, which was designed to last for two years and provide funds for local school construction. A tie vote, 7 to 7, had the effect of killing the bill.

2. Republicans challenged the constitutionality of the Thirtieth Judicial District, which by recent action was cut down to Franklin County alone (population 25,864, in 1940 census).

3. The Senate approved a bill to set up clinical care for alcoholics and Lieut. Governor L. Preston Collins, of Marion, broke a 17-17 tie to decide that the $250,000 cost would come from the general fund rather than liquor profits. It now goes to the House.

Anti-Red Bill Advanced

4. The Senate passed, 37 to 0, the Moncure-Locher "anti-Communist" bill without a spoken word of opposition. The measure, making it a felony to advocate the overthrow of the State or Federal Government by force.

5. The House passed a bill to set up a State board of cosmetic art examiners, much more limited than an earlier cosmetology bill.

6. The Long Senate bill, providing that applications for absentee voters' ballots need not be notarized, was reported out by the House committee on privileges and elections. It also provides that such ballots may be handed personally to applicants by the registrar, instead of being sent by registered mail.

Arlington Bill Approved

The committee also reported, with one amendment, the McCandlish bill providing for recounts of tied election votes.

The committee approved four bills sponsored by Arlington delegates. These would require registration books to be closed six days in advance of a special election or referendum, to permit salaries of $1800 per year for members of the Arlington board, and to increase special fees of members of electoral boards who supervise the printing of ballots and affix an official seal to them.

County and city strategists prepared for a momentous battle on the floor of the House tomorrow over the Crockett annexation bill—requiring a majority vote in the area to be annexed before the city could proceed with an annexation case.

Reds Protest Again on Hops In the Orient

London, March 4 (AP).—Russia has filed a second protest against the activities of American airplanes in the Far East, the Moscow radio said tonight.

A broadcast heard in London said the Soviet Union had protested "continued violations of the freedom of merchant shipping" by United States planes off Japan.

It was the fourth Russian protest to the United States in the past six weeks concerning American activities in the so-called military field.

Tonight's Moscow broadcast said the Soviet foreign ministry sent a note on January 30 to the American Embassy in Moscow about American aircraft which have been examining Soviet merchant vessels in the Yellow Sea and the Sea of Japan.

The broadcast said the United States has not yet replied to this note.

"In the meantime," the broadcast continued, "the government has heard about fresh violations" and a note insisting on immediate measures to stop these violations."

Hotel Greeters Meet In Convention Today

Boothe Leads New Law Fight

position clear because his position in the General Assembly caused him to be a patron of most administrative measures.

One section of the bill debated tonight would limit parties placing Presidential candidates on the ballot to those who polled at least 5 per cent of the total vote in the preceding general election. Members interpreted this to mean only the Democratic and Republican parties would qualify under this section.

Would Require Petitions

A second section, however, would let presidential candidates of other parties get on the ballot by a petition of 1000 qualified voters—but they would have to use a party name different than the two major parties.

Parties qualifying for the ballot by petitio nwould have t odo so at least 30 days before the election.

The substitute bill retains the "political punch" which would let Virginia's Democratic Party leaders break with a national presidential ticket headed by President Truman. It reserves to Virginia State party conventions the right to instruct presidential electors to vote for candidates other than those picked by the National Convention. Such instructions would have to be issued 60 days before the November election.

Delegate Boothe said the bill is "possibly the most liberal voting law in the world today."

"It protects the Democratic Party in Virginia in the use of its name, and makes it free to use its influence in the councils of the Nation," said Boothe.

Boothe declared the bill strikes back at the "anti-States' rights program which is being railroaded through the national legislature." He said in the dispute over the President's civil rights program, "Governor Tuck has President Truman dead to rights."

Uniform Ballot Claimed

Boothe said the proposed new law will give Virginia a uniform ballot on which in each column the party name will come first followed by names of the presidential candidates and then by the names of the electors.

Boothe made clear that Democrats in Virginia would keep the power to vote for candidates other than those of the national Democratic Party.

"We'll decide in June how to instruct our delegates to the National Convention and after the convention we'll meet again to decide whether to support the national candidates.

"If the nominee at the convention is Marshall (Secretary of State George C. Marshall), I have no doubt Virginia's delegates at the convention will be the first ones tramping down the aisle beneath his banner."

Klan Leader Calls Truman 'Gone Goslin'

Atlanta, March 4 (AP).—Grand Dragon Samuel Green of the Ku Klux Klan believes President Truman is a "gone goslin" politically but won't say if the Klan plans any action against the President's civil rights program.

The Klan head, a small man with a clipped mustache, said today Mr. Truman "has split the Democratic party" in his bid for "the votes of Negroes in Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York."

Green added that "the klan is fighting for a principle. Our contention is—although we don't believe in slavery—that our forefathers didn't even consider the Negro when they wrote the Constitution.

"Negroes then were just chattel to be bought and sold."

He declared that part of the Declaration of Independence holding that all men are created free and equal didn't apply to Negroes in the eyes of the founders of this country.

Hence, said Dr. Green, the Klan believed this is a white man's country.

"We would not," Dr. Green asserted, "rob the colored population of their rights, but we demand that they respect the rights of the white race in whose country they are permitted to reside."

Green was asked why the Klan remained hooded in public as it did during the parade at Wrightsville, Ga., Tuesday night.

"Prejudice," he replied, "prejudice by certain minorities—Jews, Catholics and other foreigners.

"For example," he continued, "if a Jew found out an employe of his was a klansman, that man would be fired." Green said such was the case involving a Catholic employer and two employes in Chattanooga.

Green was asked if the Klan's parade and speech-making in Wrightsville, Ga., on the night before the Johnson County Democratic primary was coincidence or planned.

He said it was coincidence. There were nearly 400 Negroes in the county registered to vote, but none appeared to hast his ballot.

Senate Group Approves Jobless Pay Switch

A Senate Labor Subcommittee yesterday approved President Truman's plan to place both the employment and jobless compensation services under the Labor Department.

Chairman Ball (R., Minn.) said the vote was 3-to-2. It now goes before the full 13-man Labor Committee headed by Senator Taft (R., Ohio). Taft has said Republicans generally oppose the plan.

The House already has rejected Mr. Truman's proposals.

Kindler Approval Discussion Slated

The National Symphony Orchestra Association will meet in extraordinary session to consider its board's action in voting confidence in Dr. Hans Kindler, orchestra founder and conductor.

The meeting has been called for 8 p. m., Friday, March 12, at the Commerce Department auditorium, by Frank R. Jelleff, association vice president and acting president. Notices of this first special session in eight years were in the mail last night to the association's 1376 qualified members.

Stated purposes include report of the board of directors on its "administration of the affairs of the association, including Resolution No. 1, passed by the board of directors on February 25." Also scheduled is discussion on the status of the association's sustaining fund.

Resolution No. 1, noting public criticism of board management and community opposition to Dr. Kindler as "threatening the success" of the current drive for orchestra funds, praised the conductor on "his unique accomplishments," credited him for the orchestra's "national growth," and thanked him for working "in unbroken mutual confidence with the board of directors."

An up-to-date report on the drive for funds is also scheduled for the meeting. At last official report, February 24, $92,712 of the $165,000 sought had been raised. This excluded contributions raised through the "Voice of the Symphony" contest, which will be reported out next Monday.

Md. Wallace Group Nominates Negro

Baltimore, March 4 (AP).—The Progressive (Wallace) Party of Maryland announced today its nomination of a Negro physician for the Fourth Congressional seat now held by Representative Fallon (D., Md.).

The physician, Dr. John E. T. Camper, 54, accepted the nomination, and pledged his support of the "program of Henry Wallace."

Television Set Receives At 110 Miles

Salisbury, Md., March 4 (Spl.). They all laughed when Edward M. Betts, a radio serviceman, installed a television receiver here.

Betts

Normal broadcast range is 30 to 40 miles and the nearest station to this Eastern Shore city are Baltimore and Washington, each 80 miles away, and Philadelphia, 110 miles.

But Betts surprised his critics by getting pictures he could see the very first night he flicked on the switch. Since then he's watched sports events, horse races and live commercials from WNBW and WTTG in Washington; WMAR in Baltimore, and WFIL-TV in Philadelphia.

Betts started out with an 80-foot tall antenna but in his experiments he later discovered that wasn't necessary. His rooftop aerial pulls the pictures in, too.

He has a so-called "booster" on his 32-tube Motorola receiver which amplifies the signal.

"I'm going to put in a bigger booster," he said. "I don't see why the signal can't be amplified to the same strength as when it leaves the transmitter."

One thing in favor in reception is the flat terrain of the Delmarva Peninsula. The broadcasting stations, all in areas where hilly country begins, are far above sea level in comparison with this section, which averages around 35 feet.

Betts' receiver is the first one in this section and believed to be among the farthest away from any television station in the country.

Dewey Given Edge On Stassen in N. H.

But 5 of 8 Delegates in Primary Tuesday Might Be Construed as Latter's Victory

It's a Dewey-Stassen race in New Hampshire, with the odds slightly favoring the Governor of New York.

At least that's how GOP professionals here and in New England size up Tuesday's lead-off presidential preference primary.

Many things could happen to that forecast, including voter repercussions from Harold E. Stassen's unorthodox bush-beating tour of the State just completed last night.

Governor Dewey hasn't put in a personal appearance, but extracts from his speeches are being piped in. The Dewey organization is fighting with everything it has to clinch his lead.

Experts 5 or 6 for Dewey

The professionals think five or six of the eight Republican convention delegates to be elected Tuesday will favor Dewey. If it's held to five, many will construe it as a Stassen victory. A few weeks ago, Governor M. Dale, who heads the Dewey slate, predicted seven of the eight delegates would be for Dewey.

It has been a two-man race ever since the Eisenhower boom, launched in New Hampshire, was nipped by the general's withdrawal. Much of Eisenhower's support divided between Stassen and Dewey, but a lot of it had no place to go.

That is one of the reasons Charles W. Tobey, jr., son of the Senator, who originally declared for Eisenhower, is running as an independent pledged only to vote for the best man available at the Republican convention in June.

Senator Charles W. Tobey indorsed Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) in a little-advertised Lincoln Day speech. His son still isn't saying, but there is much latent sentiment for Vandenberg that won't show officially in the winning delegate slate. There is a touch of Taft Sentiment, too, but the only Taft-pledged delegate candidate withdrew almost as quickly as he filed.

With the well-organized Stassen and Dewey forces conducting the only active campaign in New Hampshire, the broader presidential trials may have to wait for other State primaries.

Under the New Hampshire system, delegates may run in three ways. They may pledge themselves to a presidential candidate, which few ever do. Only in that case is the name of the candidate printed beside the aspirant's name on the ballot. They may declare in advance for a candidate or they may run independent.

In nearly all of the delegate races, therefore, the ballot won't specify whom the candidate favors. This is always confusing to the voter. Some of the newspapers hope to clarify things somewhat by publishing the names of each aspirant for delegate, alongside the presidential candidate he favors, on the morning of the primary.

Four delegates-at-large will be chosen, plus two delegates each from the State's two Congressional district. The Stassen and Dewey committees have each given their official blessing to a full slate of eight.

Large Vote Predicted

The two-way battle has raged so furiously in the last few days that some observers are predicting the largest primary vote ever cast in the State. The fact that the preference primary coincides with Town Meeting Day always makes for a big turnout. In 1940, the last prewar primary, 52,222 Republicans voted. In 1944, with war restrictions on transportation, the vote dropoped to 33,770. Tuesday's vote may shoot past 60,000.

Complicating a stranght-out Dewey-Strassen test is a developing battle backstage for Republican national committeeman. Frank J. Sulloway, who now holds the national committee post, heads the Stassen-blessed delegate slate. Robert W. Upton, vice chairman of the Republican State committee, is seeking Sulloway's national committee seat. Upton, a Dewey man, is also running for delegate-at-large.

Some fear the behind-the-scenes contest between Sulloway and Upton might overshadow or confuse the race between Dewey and Stassen. The national committeeman will be elected by the winning slate of delegates, after the primary. But jockeying between the two for support of delegate-candidates has already started, without much regard for their 1948 leanings.

3 Negroes Lose Segregation Suit Against Railroad

By The Associated Press

Three Negroes who sued the Southern Railway Co. because it made them sit in the colored section lost their case yesterday.

The Interstate Commerce Commission dismissed a $15,000 damage action against the railway.

The ICC said laws in most Southern States require racial segregation of travelers, and ruled as it has in previous similar complaints:

"We have concluded that defendant furnishes white and Negro passengers accommodations on The Southener that are substantially equal.

"We conclude that the maintenance and enforcement by a common carrier, by a railroad, of a reasonable rule or regulation requiring segregation of white and Negro passengers traveling in interstate commerce is not a violation of the act we adminster, provided substantial equality of treatment is afforded both races traveling under like conditions."

Third Party Idea Dangerous, Stassen Says

Hanover, N. H., March 4 (AP).—Harold E. Stassen said today he did not approve of Henry Wallace's third party, even though it would tend to split the Democrats.

The Republican presidential aspirant made his comment at a forum on the Dartmouth College campus, where more than 2000 students gave him an enthusiastic reception.

He said "the best interest of the country can be served by a two-party system."

The 41-year-old former Governor of Minnesota said splinter parties had brought the downfall of France and the Weimar Republic in Germany after the First World War.

Such a system, he said, "makes it impossible for people to reach a decision."

Stassen wound up a two-day campaign tour of New Hampshire in a final bid for support in this State's first-in-the-Nation presidential primary next Tuesday.

He faces a showdown here with Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York. Both have entered a State slate of delegates for the eight New Hampshire seats at the National Republican Convention.

Truman Administration Spending Hit by Dewey

By The Associated Press

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey denounced the Truman Administration yesterday as a foolish spendthrift threatening to bring on "ruinous inflation."

The New Yorker flung his charges from Albany in a message of thanks to Wisconsin friends who are backing him for the Republican presidential nomination.

Another politician who wants a new President, Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.), kept the drums rolling here for Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

"I am certain he will accept the (Republican) nomination if it is tendered to him at Philadelphia," Miller said in a speech before the House.

Meanwhile, Pennsylvania supporters of Henry A. Wallace's third party bid arranged a meeting at York, on Sunday. Wallace will speak.

Dewey's blasts at the Truman Administration were as sharp as those he sounded against Franklin D. Roosevelt when he ran against the late President in 1944.

"Our National Government is torn by bitterness and quarreling," the Governor said. "Its profilgate waste of the money it has wrung from our people by taxes threatens to bring us to ruinous inflation.

"Our task as Republicans is to restore integrity, competence and purpose to the National Government."

General MacArthur hasn't said he would run for the presidency and Miller, in his House speech, said the Far Eastern commander "does not desire to be an active candidate."

Nonetheless, banker Warren Wright of Chicago headed for Washington to open national headquarters for the Douglas MacArthur Campaign Committee.

Neighborhood House Kids Sing for Fun

Ask Shirley, Don and Jimmie Britt what their idea of a good time is and they'll chorus: "Singing."

A lot of patients in nearby Veterans Administration hospitals will agree with them. They've been visited by the Barney Neighborhood House glee club, of which the youthful Britts are members.

Fifteen-year-old Shirley, a student at McKinley High School, began taking voice lessons at the house about a year ago. It wasn't long before she brought brother Don, 17, in for lessons, and then Jimmie, who just turned 21.

Since then, they've been singing like mad every chance they get, and all for the fun of it. Anything from current popular tunes to semiclassical numbers and spirituals. When Shirley, an accomplished pianist, sits down at the piano at their home at 2128 4th st. ne., it's an automatic signal for bass-voiced Don and baritone Jimmie to join in—and sometimes even their mother.

The neighborhood house glee club is the idea of Mrs. Ida Naney, a former concert and opera singer who is director of the music school at the house at 470 N st. nw., and gives voice and piano lessons there. She is presently forming a "young boys' band." Soon she hopes to have a group of 7-to-10-year-old boys to sing with the band.

But her special pride is the 20-voice glee club. Composed of 10 boys and 10 girls, mostly teenagers, it plays an average of two "engagements" monthly at veterans' hospitals, or institutions, such as Home for the Aged at Blue Plains, the Hebrew Home for the Aged, and neighborhood churches.

Mrs. Naney says Shirley Britt was speaking for the glee club members, too, when she said the glee club "is more fun than anything else."

"The youngsters are learning music, developing their talents, and thoroughly enjoying themselves in the process. It's a successful combination of education and a social get-together," she said.

War for Guided-Missile Bases On Moon Held Possible by '98

London, March 4 (AP).—A grim war for bases on the moon "from which to launch guided missiles against the earth" may develop within 50 years, says the Journal of the British Interplanetary Society.

The article, written by A. V. Cleaver, outlined possible development of interplanetary conflict far more terrible than the atomic bomb.

"I find it very easy to believe in a future race to establish national bases on the moon, a territory-grabbing competition closely analogous to the one already so familiar on earth . . ." Cleaver wrote.

"If such bases could include facilities for manufacturing fuel and other products, as eventually they might," he said, "then there could be no better site from which to launch guided missiles against the earth."

"The relatively small gravitational pull encountered on the moon will provide a much more favorable ratio of payload to fuel than on earth," he explained.

"This means whoever first establishes a working base on the moon will be able to launch infinitely bigger and better missiles than any earth-bound enemy," he declared.

He said formation of an interplanetary project by a "superstate" or a large association of nations might come within 30 years.

PEOPLE KNOW Butter BY ITS GOLDEN COLOR

Yes, by its golden color—nature's color derived from cream and cream alone—people know BUTTER—for its matchless taste, its flavory goodness, as America's symbol of good living.

People know BUTTER as the real thing—made from rich, golden cream. It takes four pints of cream to make a pound of BUTTER. No wonder it's so good. BUTTER contains no basic ingredient other than cream. No other fat. No cottonseed oil, cocoanut oil or bean oil. No foreign oils. BUTTER is the real thing—pure cream churned to its golden goodness.

BUTTER is a natural product. To make it . . . pure cream is churned until the golden globules of butterfat gather to form BUTTER. The natural golden-glow color is there! The matchless cream-rich flavor is there. That's BUTTER as you know it by taste, by looks.

As a spread, cooking aid or flavoring ingredient, BUTTER has no equal—no counterpart. Rich in natural food values—Vitamin A in its natural source, plus Vitamin D, Vitamin E and other natural food elements—BUTTER is really nature's masterpiece.

BUTTER's natural golden-glow . . . bestowed by four pints of cream in every pound . . . is your way to identify BUTTER . . . your protection against substitution . . . your guarantee that you get what you pay for—golden, delicious BUTTER. That's why all America has come to say—

PBA Denies Agency Office Is 'Unsafe'

Overpricing Charge At Viers Mills Being Checked

Public Buildings Administration officials yesterday denied Washington Central Labor Union charges that the regional office of the Social Security Agency is housed in an unsafe building.

The AFL group had adapted a resolution on Monday urging removal of the office from the present location, the De Moll Building at 700 12th st. nw., as "neither safe nor convenient."

The resolution referred to a recent editorial in the Washington Trades Unionist, official organ of the CLU, which cited the risk of panic from fire or other catastrophe to the elderly persons who are the majority of the vistors to the sixth floor contact office.

Charles E. Reynolds, assistant manager of the Social Security regional office, agreed with the editorial's assertion that the contact office is crowded, dirty and "definitely unsafe," with a fire escape reached by climbing over a radiator and through a window.

However, L. A. Ziernicki, space officer for the Public Buildings Administration, pointed out that an enclosed stairwell of brick construction which can be used as a fire escape is about four feet away from the external steel stairway.

As soon as Government-owned space is available the regional agency will be moved, Ziernicki said, in line with a program which has reduced seven million feet of leased space to three million since VJ-Day.

A Congressional staff investigator and an independent appraiser yesterday paid an official visit to the Viers Mill Village veterans housing project to check charges of overpricing.

Their guide for the day was Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.), whose vitriolic denunciation of the Montgomery County housing development initiated the preliminary probe by the House Committee on Executive Expenditures.

Veterans of eight other states have joined the Marylanders in complaining of overvaluation of their GI homes by Veterans Administration and Federal Housing Administration appraisers, and price-gouging by some builders.

As a result, Representative Clare E. Hoffman (R., Mich.), chairman of the committee, has named a subcommittee to hold formal hearings into the complaints.

The subcommittee will be headed by Hoffman, himself, and will include Representatives J. Caleb Boggs (R., Del.) and Henderson Lanham (D., Ga.).

Investigator George H. Perkins is expected to have his report ready by the beginning of next week. On the basis of the report, the subcommittee will decide whether or not to proceed with a full dress hearing.

Viers Mill Village project, located between Wheaton and Rockville, calls for 1400 GI homes, of which around 200 are already built.

Meanwhile, Commander A. Y. Barbee of the Silver Spring Memorial Post, VFW, said last night he will appoint a committee to study the many pro and con arguments of the case in order to be able to answer when questioned on veterans' opinions.

Faces Life

Ex-Suitor On Trial for Kidnaping

George Paul Harding, 36, of 3900 Macomb st. nw., yesterday went on trial in District Court for kidnaping his former sweetheart and beating her until she promised to marry him.

Prosecutor William Hitz, in his opening statement to the all-male jury, declared the woman, Alsace Lorraine McCormick, 26, of 24 8th st. ne., was forced out of a male escort's car at gunpoint and driven into Maryland by Harding.

This was early in the morning of last September 26, Hitz said. He told the jury Miss McCormick was parked in a car in front of her home with a former schoolmate, Leon Guervitz, 28, of 221 15th st. ne., when Harding drove up with two companions.

Threatened by Harding who held a pistol, Hitz said, Miss McCormick left Guervitz and was driven into Maryland with Harding beating her with the pistol and his fists.

The beating stopped when Miss McCormick promised to marry her assailant, Hitz asserted. Harding drove her to Prpvidence Hospital, he said, as she was suffering from a cut head.

Harding told hospital authorities that she had been hurt in a Maryland accident, Hitz said, and the girl was admitted for treatment. A day later, Hitz declared, Harding, having discovered that the girl had reported a different story to hospital authorities, sneaked into her room at 4 a. m., and beat her as she lay in bed.

Visiting Federal Judge Ben Moore, of West Virginia, presiding at the case, continued the trial until Monday at the conclusion of the Government's opening statement. The jurist has other court business today.

Accuser Fails to Identify Peckham in Abortion Trial

The Government's case against Dr. Henry L. Peckham, jr., 40, Southeast Washington physician charged with abortion, suffered again yesterday as the complaining witness, Mrs. Hubert Stottlemyer, failed to identify the doctor.

This was the second blow dealt Prosecutor Charles Murray in as many days. When the trial opened Wednesday in District Court, a cab driver, James P. Fox, who had admitted he acted as a go-between, declared that Dr. Peckham was not the doctor with whom he had dealt.

The defendant is acused of having performed illegal operations on Mrs. Stottlemyer January 3 and January 5, 1947.

Asked by Murray if she recognized the doctor who had treated her, Mrs. Stottlemyer replied evenly:

"I am afraid I don't see anyone in this court who looks like the doctor I visited."

Murray said yesterday he plans to rest his case today after recalling Fox to the stand "to get some details cleared up."

Mrs. Stottlemyer's husband was a Government witness in an abortion case involving Dr. Peckham and Attorney James J. Laughlin a month ago. Both of the latter were acquitted. The Stottlemyers now live in St. Paul, Minn.

Chicagoan Given Pressman's Post

Arthur J. Goldberg, a Chicago lawyer, yesterday was named general counsel of the CIO, succeeding Lee Pressman, who resigned recently to work in behalf of Henry A. Wallace's third party.

CIO President Philip Murray said that Goldberg would assume his new duties on March 18.

Goldberg, 39, was a major in the Army during the war and before his service was a special assistant to Gen. William J. Donovan, head of the Office of Strategic Services.

He is a senior member of the law firm of Goldberg, Devoe and Brussell and will retain his connection with the firm.

A graduate of Northwestern University Law School, Goldberg is a professor of law at John Marshall Law School and a lecturer at the University of Chicago School of Industrial Relations.

He plans to make his headquarters here.

Md. Ex-GI Priority Suits State Workers

School Head Out

Protest Cited In Firing at Cheltenham

A resigned member of the board of managers at the Cheltenham School for Negro Boys in Prince Georges County yesterday criticized the board for firing its new superintendent after a six-month probationary period.

The criticism was embodied in a statement issued by Dr. R. L. Jackson, one of the four Negro members of the nine-man board that resigned recently so Governor Lane could name a panel made up entirely of Negroes.

Dr. Jackson said he also spoke for J. Marshall Stewart and Carroll Hynson, two other members of the old board.

The old group, as its last official act, a week ago dismissed Calvin L. Kiah as superintendent. He formerly was principal of a Negro high school at Cambridge, Md., is a war veteran, and won the job six months ago after a competitive examination under the State merit system.

The retiring board said he had failed to demonstrate the "requisite administrative ability, judgment, temperament and leadership."

Dr. Jackson said yesterday this action was taken at a meeting when he, Stewart and J. Grayson Luttrell were absent and only after a strong protest by Hynson. Hynson asked to be excused from voting.

The old board had said its action in removing Kiah was unanimous.

The Governor asked Dr. William E. Henry, president of the State Teachers College at Bowie, to summon the new members to their first meeting at the State House in Annapolis today.

Declare They See No 'Adverse Effect' On Merit System

Baltimore, March 4 (AP).—Veterans' preference under the merit system does not "adversely affect" efficiency of the State government, the Maryland State Classified Employes Association said today.

Its chairman, John S. Shriver, appeared before the legislative council. The lawmakers are continuing a study of the merit system which was launched some months ago.

The association, Shriver said, doesn't feel its members are put to any disadvantage by the preference system. This gives an applying veteran five extra points on examination grades and places him automatically on top of the list of those who pass.

Speaking "as a private individual and not for the association," Shriver told the council that "no one will begrudge the veteran the extra points or the provision that he must be considered first for the job.

"The hitch" is, however, that no one tries to take advantage of the clause permitting rejection of veterans "for good and sufficient cause," he said.

"It's this phase which is doing the veteran more harm than good in the long run. You don't get ahead in the world by cramming yourself down someone's throat."

Speaking for the association, he recommended to the council that the merit system law be made part of the Maryland constitution to forestall any future spoils system.

He further advocated that employes of the comptrollers' income tax and alcohol division be blanketed into the merit system without examination since most of them have demonstrated efficiency through long tenure.

Two Jewelers Fined On Lottery Charges

Two nearby Maryland men, both described by police as jewelers, were fined a total of $800 on gambling charges in Hyattsville Police Court yesterday.

The men, both of whom pleaded guilty to the charges, were Frank Charles Van Dalsum, 52, 5109 Upshur st., Decatur Heights, who was fined $500, and Gideon R. Yates, 31, of Clinton, who was assessed $300. Both were charged with operating a lottery.

The two were arrested at Van Dulsum's home in a raid on March 1, Prince Georges County's first 1948 foray against gambling interests.

SCC Asked to Order Better Phone Service

Fredericksburg, Va., March 4 (Spl.).—Commonwealth's Attorney T. Stokley Coleman has filed a lengthy complaint with the State Corporation Commission in behalf of the Spotsylvania County board of supervisors asking that W. P. Miller, jr., operating as Rural Telephones Inc., be compelled to improve telephone service or relinquish his franchise to another concern.

5th T. E. Darner Finally Gets $1000 Willed by Aunt

Frederick, Md., March 4 (AP).—A check for the $1000 Thomas E. Darner's aunt left him in a will 10 years ago was in the mail today.

At least four other Thomas E. Darners have filed claims for the bequest, said Register of Wills Harry D. Radcliffe, but he's satisfied Thomas 5th is the real one.

Darner lives in Buffalo, N. Y., but he produced a picture of his father, the names of Maryland residents he knew as a younster, samples of his handwriting and other proof of his identity, Radcliffe said.

Darner said he never heard of the will until he read about it in a Buffalo paper.

His aunt was Mrs. Lydia E. Darner of nearby Walkersville.

Dundalk Man to Run On Wallace Platform

Baltimore, March 4 (AP).—Michael J. Clifford of Dundalk today entered the Second District Congressional district race as a "Progressive Party" candidate on an all-out-for-Wallace platform.

West Virginian Guilty In Death of Landlord

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 4 (AP).—A Berkeley County jury today convicted Alexander Earl Mason of second degree murder in the slaying of his landlord at nearby Darkesville last November.

Judge Decatur H. Rodgers sentenced the 43-year-old truck driver to 18 years in the West Virginia State Prison.

Mason was accused of shooting 73-year-old Henry Payne Bryarly after an argument over rent.

Arundel 'Dog Hotel' Has Rabbit as Guest

Annapolis, Md., March 4 (AP).—The dog hotel of the Anne Arundel County Society for the Protection of Cruelty to Animals had a new guest today—a rabbit.

An attache at the animal shelter said the bunny was picked up on the State house lawn and is being fed greens until the owner shows up.

Co-op Boards to Meet

Manassas, Va., March 4 (Spl.).—Representatives of nine communities' Southern States Cooperative local boards will hold their annual midwinter conference at 7 p. m. Tuseday at the Masonic Temple. The mid-year report on Southern States operations and financial standing will be made.

Clothing Gift Includes $70

New Windsor, Md., March 4 (AP).—Mrs. T. C. Witt didn't go through her husband's pants pockets.

She just breathed a sigh of relief at the long-waited chance to get rid of them when a truck drove to their house in Covington, Va., Sunday collecting old clothes for Europe.

Then they telephoned a church world service center at New Windsor which handles about 800,000 pounds of old clothes each week. CWS volunteers began looking for Witt's old pants. Hours later they found the money and put it on a truck returning to Covington.

January Births in Va. Hit Year-and-Half Low

Richmond, Va., March 4 (AP).—Fewer births were recorded in Virginia during January than for any month in the past year and a half.

The State Health Department's bureau of vital statistics today revealed 5054 births in the State in January, 1948, contrasted with 5645 for January, 1947. The year 1947 topped all records for births.

Virginia Seafood Survey Bill Gets Favorable Report

Richmond, Va., March 4 (AP).—The House committee on Chesapeake and its tributaries today favorably reported Governor Tuck's bill for a hydrographic and biological study of Virginia's seafood resources by the Virginia Fisheries Laboratory.

The laboratory is authorized to work with similar agencies of other States and the Federal Government.

Delegate H. H. Adams of Northampton said the committee members were virtually agreed upon a substitute for the fisheries commission's bill increasing commercial seafood licenses and levying a tax of 10 cents a bushel on oysters from beds planted by the State. He said another meeting of the committee would be necessary, however, before the details are completed.

Adams introduced the bill at the request of the commission. Certain of the provisions of the original bill were vigorously opposed by watermen.

TIME TO ENJOY WINE

You'll find it costs so little... and adds so much to every kind of fish dish

The Wines of California are made from the pure juice of fresh ripe grapes . . . and so they taste particularly good with food.

White table wine and fish is one of the best-liked combinations. That is because white table wines like California Sauterne have light, delicate flavors that bring out the full natural goodness of fish. Actually, you will find that fish cooked in wine—and served with wine—has an utterly new and better taste.

California Sherry with chowder is another good wine-and-food combination. Try the recipe given below. At today's wine prices, you will find it costs but little to add such goodness to your dinners.

Wine Advisory Board, 717 Market St., San Francisco 3.

Fish steaks poached in Sauterne... umm... try 'em!

Lay fish steaks or fillets in a large skillet. Cover with ½ cup canned consomme and 1 cup Sauterne wine. Season, dot with butter, and let simmer until fish is tender. Serve hot with glasses of chilled Sauterne wine

Taste what Sherry does for clam chowder

Open a can of clam chowder and heat it according to directions on the can. Just before serving, stir in a few spoonfuls of Sherry wine and serve piping hot. For even greater enjoyment, accompany your soup with a glass of good California Sherry wine

GI's War Bride Asks Divorce, Cites Cruelty

A GI's English war bride filed suit in District Court for divorce yesterday on grounds of cruelty.

Mrs. Evelyn Baker of 1126 N. Capitol st., who said that she was married to Walter Baker of Mount Pleasant, Tenn., in London during the war, said that upon coming to the United States she was obliged to live with relatives "among the mountain folk."

According to the suit filed by her attorney, Joseph J. Lyman, she said that "they had to live in a three-room shack with three other adult males, and one adult female."

Mrs. Baker further charged that she and their 3-year-old son, James, jr., "endured considerable hardship in an atmosphere of squalor and crowded, unhealthful living."

Finally, Mrs. Baker declared in her suit, she took her child and moved to Washington. She said her husband followed her here and "for a month or six weeks, day and night, phoned her with threats."

Mrs. Lamarre Tells of 'Gift'

suit against Meyers for his statements concerning his relations with her.

She was employed in the personnel department, Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, when Meyers came in looking for a new secretary, Mrs. Lamarre said. He offered to pay $1620, the salary of a CAF-3, while her salary at the time was $1440. She went to work for Meyers in April, 1938, and continued until June, 1939. At that time, she said, she went to California to join her husband who was working at Douglas Aircraft in Santa Monica.

In October, 1939, Mrs. Lamarre told the jury, Meyers telephoned her immediate boss, Colonel Smith, and she answered the telephone.

In the course of the conversation, Meyers asked if the Lamarres would like to return to Ohio. She said that he told her he knew of a job for her husband.

She informed her husband, she said, and he subsequently wrote to Meyers that he did not believe they wanted to come back to Dayton.

After court adjourned, Mrs. Lamarre left the courthouse arm in arm wit hher husband. The two celebrated their thirteenth wedding anniversary last Monday.

Before Mrs. Lamarre took the stand, the Government called Lawrence Bell, president of Bell Aircraft Co. He testified that during the war years, his company had done about 1 million dollar gross, or $900,000 net, business with Aviation Electric Corp.

Bell said Aviation Electric was recommended to him by Meyers, when Meyers was a finance officer at Wright Field, Dayton.

He said his friendship with Meyers had nothing to do with his giving Aviation Electric Corp. subcontracts. His company needed the production, Bell testified.

Defense counsel insisted upon calling Bell as a character witness for Meyers. Bell said that in Washington and Dayton he had heard of Meyers as a person of good reputation.

This opened the way for more Government questions.

"If you had known that the Defendant Meyers when a major on the Army Air Forces was the owner of the Aviation Electric Corp. would you have given him a subcontract?" shot United States Attorney George Morris Fay.

"No," replied Bell.

Bell said he had heard discussion, after the Senate hearings, of Meyers' ownership of aviation stock, including some Bell stock when he was an Army officer.

Earlier in the day, attorneys for Meyers failed to get a two-week recess in the trial. Judge Alexander Holtzoff denied a motion on the ground that once a trial jury begins hearing a case no temporary adjournment is allowed.

Mrs. Lamarre's brother, Thomas E. Readnower, one-time self-styled "dummy" vice president of Aviation Electric, quietly insisted under a blistering cross-examination that Meyers had promised to pay "expenses and then some" when he came here last October to testify before the Senate committee.

Readnower said Meyers had tried to get him to deny that Meyers received $150,000 worth of war profits from Aviation Electric Corp.

"I was in a position where my brother-in-law had already committed perjury," Readnower testified.

"I could either lie, too, to protect him from prosecution for perjury, or tell the truth.

PUC Grants Transit Line Route Change

A new North Capitol Street-Rosslyn streetcar line to run from Rosslyn to 12th and Quincy sts. ne., was approved by the Public Utilities Commission yesterday.

It will begin operation March 28 or as soon thereafter as Capital Transit Co. completes arrangements to substitute buses on the Rosslyn-Benning streetcar line east of 15th st. and New York ave. nw.

To Merge Section

The new line will merge the remaining section of the Rosslyn-Benning line with the North Capitol st. line in this manner:

1. Westbound cars on the N. Capitol st. line will continue out Pennsylvania ave. nw. to Rosslyn instead of turning left on 19th st. and turning around via F and 18th sts.

2. Eastbound Rosslyn line cars will turn left at 15th and G sts. nw. and follow the N. Capitol st. line instead of traveling via 15th st. and Pennsylvania ave. to the Peace Monument turnaround, as originally ordered in the bus substitution plan.

Advantages Cited

PUC said the merger plan, suggested by CTC, "will be decidedly advantageous" in reducing Pennsylvania ave. congestion in front of the White House and between 19th st. and Peace Monument.

CTC Vice President E. C. Giddings said the change will not affect service of the No. 8? Maryland line, which serves Interior, Navy and other Government office buildings in the Potomac Park area.

The PUC order also permits the transit company to eliminate streetcar tracks on New York ave. nw. between 11th and 14th sts. New York ave. tracks will curve to join those on 14th st. nw.

Bender, Downey Not to Seek Reelection to City Council

George K. Bender, vice-mayor of Alexandria, and Edward W. Downey yesterday announced they will not seek reelection to the City Council this year. Their withdrawal followed Tuesday's victory for the at-large method of council elections in Alexandria.

John J. Ewald is the only one of the six ward members who has not definitely declared he will not enter the April 6 Democratic primary for election June 8. He said last night he has still not made up his mind.

Three more candidates for the seven-man at-large council filed with the Democratic Committee yesterday for the primary. They were Albert A. Smoot, Arthur F. Campbell and John T. Worthington. Both Smoot and Campbell had announced they would run if the at-large plan won.

Campbell resigned as chairman of the city's Democratic Committee to become a candidate. Vice chairman Gilbert J. Cox, jr., said the committee will probably name a new chairman Monday when it meets to certify party candidates to the Electoral Board.

U. N. Intervention Asked in Curacao

Party Asks Help in Getting Dutch To Grant 'Democratic Government'

Willemstad, Curacao, Dutch West Indies, March 4 (U.P.).—Declaring the people of the Dutch West Indies "cannot obtain the rights inherent to civilized mankind, the Democratic Party has appealed to the United Nations and the Pan American Union for assistance in securing a "form of government compatible with democratic ideals," it was disclosed today.

(The Dutch West Indies consist of three islands off the north coast of Venezuela—Aruba, Caracao and Bonaire. Some of the largest oil refineries in the world are located in these islands. During the war German U-boats shelled Aruba in an effort to knock out the world's largest 100-octane gasoline refinery which was supplying aviation gas in the Caribbean.—Editor.)

Having returned virtually empty handed from a round table conference in The Hague where they presented their home rule demands to the Dutch government, the Curacao delegation called a mass meeting to adopt a new plan of action.

The cabled appeal to the U. N., signed by Democratic Party President E. Jonkheer, made the following points:

1. The Netherlands in 1942 promised self-government to the Netherlands West Indies immediately upon the end of World War II.

2. With an annual balanced budget of over $25,000,000 and an illiteracy rate below 4 per cent, the Netherlands West Indies are fully capable of exercising self-determination.

3. In accepting the U. N. Charter, the Netherlands government pledged itself to terminate all forms of colonial government.

4. Direct negotiations with the Netherlands government have failed.

Yeasts Used For Cheaper Vitamin B

Omaha, March 4 (AP).—Yeasts and fungo offer ways to make a B-vitamin and alcohol cheaper, the National Farm Chemurgic Council was told today.

The findings were described by Dr. Cecil T. Langford of the Northern Regional Research Laboratory at Peoria, Ill.

The vitamin is riboflavin, which promotes growth.

The laboratory developed a low-cost food or medium for a yeast which gives good yields of the vitamin, Dr. Lanford said, at about one-third the cost of making it by chemical means.

A fungus was put to work to produce a chemical useful in making alcohol from grains. The chemical is an enzyme, amylase, which converts starch into sugar.

The enzyme from the fungus could substitute for expensive barley malt. It gives the same or slightly higher yield of alcohol and would save a distillery as much as $480 a day if it is mashing 5000 bushels of grain daily, Dr. Langford said.

Jury Foreman Named

C. Norris Hartman, 55-year-old Suitland (Md.) grocer, has been chosen as foreman of a grand jury to be sworn in April 5 in Prince Georges County Circuit Court, court officials announced yesterday. Completion of the jury panel, to include 73 other residents of the county, is expected next week.

Britain Expected To Seek Advance From World Fund

By The Associated Press

Government officials yesterday said they expected Britain to apply shortly for an 85-million-dollar advance from the International Monetary Fund.

Now that Britain has drawn all of its $3,750,000,000 American loan, these officials said they felt certain the British would turn to the fund in a move to scrape up all the dollars they can.

The most Britain is eligible to borrow from the fund until next September is 85 million dollars because London earlier withdrew 240 million dollars in three installments. No member of the fund can withdraw more than 25 per cent of its quota each 12 months.

Government officials said the 85 million dollars probably would be enough to last Britain until about April 1.

Political-Minded Strip Artist Dunked in LSU Campus Lake

Baton Rouge, La., March 4 (U.P.)—Stormy, the French quarter stripper with a curiosity about college life, invaded Louisiana State University for an impromptu act today and exuberant students dunked her in the campus lake as she peeled down to her G-string.

"Well, boys will be boys," Stormy said as she struggled out of the water, goose pimples covering her where the G-string didn't.

Campus policemen, rushed her, shivering, to a substation, and then to Baton Rouge.

Stormy whose real name is Stacie Laurence, invaded the LSU campus to settle a personal score with Maj. J. Perry Cole, dean of students affairs. When she announced she was going to campaign on the campus for a candidate in the student elections, Cole said "no."

Her candidate withdrew yesterday, to keep from "disgracing" the university, but Stormy went to LSU anyway.

As her band played and the students gathered, Stormy went into her bumps and grinds and began to peel.

First her glasses went, then her blouse, then her skirt. Under that, Stormy had on a brief bathing suit.

Wiggling provocatively, she slipped two fingers into the back of the trunks to flip them off. It was then that the students grabbed her, bore her off tothe lake, and threw her in.

Police Lack Clew In Strangulation Of Navy Film Man

New York police yesterday reported they are still without a concrete clew in the eighty-day-old slaying of Harvery M. Hoeberle, 35-year-old film expert of Falls Church, Va.

Haeberle, in New York on a Navy film mission, was smothered to death in his hotel room after being trussed in a version of a Chinese strangulation knot.

Authorities planned to question a man arrested in Miami, Fla., in connection with several New York hotel robberies and a torture case but they saw little prospect of linking him with the Hoeberle slaying, they said yesterday.

Joint School Plan of South Wins Praise

Gainesville, Fla., March 4 (AP).—The Southern Regional College plan for joint State operation of top-grade schools in highly specialized fields today was foreseen as the answer to Northern education problems, too.

Owen D. Young, New York industrialist and educator, and Oliver C. Carmichael, president of the Carnegie Foundation, both indorsed the plan in addresses at a conference of Southern college presidents and deans on the proposal.

Presidents of several Southern Negro colleges sat with the educators.

One of the first specific items will be a proposal to take over MeHarry medical college at Nashville, Tenn., at a regional school for Negroes.

The Southern plan calls for establishment of white schools as well as Negro colleges on a cooperative basis for those fields in which no State could afford to finance a high ranking institution.

The council set up a five-man executive committee which includes President H. C. Byrd of the University of Maryland, secretary.

Guard Insists On Control of Concessions

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, head of the District National Guard, yesterday declared that the Guard can make no concessions on Armory concessions.

In other words, General Cox said, when it comes to selling frankfurters, hawking ice cream, checking hats and the like, the Guard wants complete control and profits.

The general's statement, before a House District Subcommittee, made it clear that reports of a compromise between the National Guard and the District Board of Commissioners are premature.

The District government, backed by the Board of Trade, wants control over non-Guard activities at the Armory.

The Armory was completed in 1942, and paid for with $2,700,000 in District tax funds. It was occupied throughout the war by Federal agencies. In July, 1947, the Guard assumed control, but the District Commissioners demanded part of the receipts. In December, joint operation was agreed upon pending action by Congress.

General Cox argued yesterday that funds from the concessions at the Armory are needed for morale-building recreational activities on behalf of the local Guard. Also, he added, control was necessary to assure security for the equipment lent to the Guard by the Army.

The subcommittee is expected to report out a bill shortly to settle the Armory dispute.

Troops Man Borders of Guatemala

Guatemala, March 4 (AP).—Troop movements on both sides of the border were reported today as Guatemala's wrath against the British over possession of British Honduras mounted.

The government said army units had been sent to the frontier adjoining British Honduras to prevent a possible British invasion.

Col. Alejandro Maldonado, governor of Peten Province, told the government he received reports that about 1500 British troops with field cannon had taken up positions in British Honduras at the Guatemalan border.

The Foreign Ministry said it had ordered soldiers to the border "in view of the actual emergency precipitated by the disembarkment of British troops in our territory of Belize (British Honduras)."

President Juan Jose Arevalo broadcast an appeal for all Guatemalans to unite against what he termed a British threat.

(Britain sent two cruisers to Belize "to maintain order."

(The British government today repeated its offer to lay the matter before the International Court of Justice.)

Costa Rica's Bank Holiday Is Extended

San Jose, Costa Rica, March 4 (AP).—The bank holiday declared Tuesday was extended for three more days as fears persisted today that political tension may bring a general run. The closing was decreed after heavy withdrawls Monday.

Residents of the capital spent a restless night because of heavy shooting in the main army barracks and scattered military posts, beginning at midnight.

As far as could be ascertained, the troops just fired in the air to forestall any possibility of attack on the barracks in the darkness.

Nearly 75 per cent of all business establishments closed today for the funeral of Dr. Carlos Valverde, opposition politician, who was fatally wounded in an exchage of fire with government troops following the disputed February 8 presidential election.

Followers of opposition presidential aspirant Otilio Ulate Blanco whose election was nullified by congress Monday, claimed a general "passive resistance" strike was near.

Not only did the 6-foot 8-inch Governor stand up a joint Senate-House Judiciary Subcommittee before which he was to present his argument in favor of giving States unquestioned title to tidelands, but he passed up a meeting with 500 New York models who had voted him "America's No. 1 Leap-Year Bachelor."

The girls had expected to meet Folsom in New York yesterday afternoon—same time as the subcommittee was meeting.

Folsom, who had been dodging newspapermen's questions about a paternity suit filed against him throughout his 24-hour stay in Washington, left by automobile to return "to Alabama to attend to State business."

He said he would be back in a week or 10 days for a meeting of Southern Governors.

Both Folsom and Kenneth G. Griffin, special counsel to the Governor, who was left to present Folsom's view to the subcommittee, blamed the paternity suit filed by Mrs. Christine Putnam Johnston in Cullman, Ala., to politics.

Mrs. Johnston charges that Folsom is the father of her 22-month-old son and wants to be declared his common-law wife.

Courtesy Every Day

Although the rash of discourtesy that spread generally during the strain of war is now being dissipated gradually with the return of a buyer's market, it is no easy job to root it out. There are still plenty of snippy clerks and acid motormen who vent their spleen on the public, and Washington is not without its share of them. That is only one of the reasons why the courtesy program now being sponsored by the Greater National Capital Committee of the Board of Trade is a good idea. For there is no good reason why a big city cannot learn the gracious ways that seem to come naturally in certain parts of the country, or why this particular city has to be a home of the cold shoulder and curt response. Indeed, there is compelling reason for Washingtonians especially to be well-mannered, for tourists are a big industry here, and whether they are received courteously often determines whether they will return. Courtesy is both an individual state of mind and a community attitude. It costs nothing and it is, quite practically, good business.

Defaming Character

The irresponsibility of the House Committee on Un-American Activities is illustrated anew in the extravagant charges made against Dr. Edward U. Condon, director of the National Bureau of Standards. It is worth examining these charges in some detail and with dispassionate detachment for the sake of the insight they afford into the committee's morals and tactics. The Condon case offers abundant proof, we think, that the Committee on Un-American Activities has become an embarrassing liability to Congress, a threat to the rights of citizens who are its victims and actually a handicap to the maintenance of effective security in the sensitive agencies of the Federal Government.

Let us look first at the way—the typical way—in which the charges against Dr. Condon were made. They emanated from a contrivedly theatrical subcommittee meeting held by the side of the chairman's hospital sickbed and were released without even taking time to refer them to the committee as a whole. The justification offered for this haste was urgency—although there was nothing in these charges that the chairman did not divulge at least by innuendo last summer. They were made in such haste, indeed, that the committee never found time even to question Dr. Condon himself, although he had long ago requested a chance to appear before it.

Now let us turn to the nature of the charges. They were sensational in the extreme—sensational and so vague as to be virtually meaningless. They implied, without directly asserting, that Dr. Condon was engaged in espionage activities, that he constituted a menace to the security of the Nation's atomic secrets. Then, after having stated the case with such extravagance and having done irreparable injury to Dr. Condon's reputation, the subcommittee retreated from its original position and declared it was accusing the scientist of nothing more than indiscretion in some of his personal associations.

And what of the basis for these charges? Well, they were based principally upon a letter from J. Edgar Hoover to W. Averell Harriman which declares that Dr. Condon was in contact with "an individual alleged, by a self-confessed Soviet espionage agent, to have engaged in espionage activities with the Russians in Washington, D. C., from 1941 to 1944." Rather, it is based on part of this letter. For Representative Thomas, the subcommittee chairman, has now acknowledged that his report neglected—inadvertently, he says—to include a sentence from the Hoover letter asserting Dr Condon's contact with the alleged spy constituted no evidence of disloyalty whatever.

So far as Dr. Condon's discretion as distinct from his loyalty is concerned, this is clearly not within the jurisdiction of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. It is in the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Commerce. Secretary Harriman appears to be satisfied with the director of his Bureau of Standards, and the American public can have confidence, we think, that the former Ambassador to Russia is quite as alert to the dangers of indiscretion as Mr. Thomas.

Secretary Harriman has satisfied himself, too, as to Dr. Condon's loyalty. For Dr. Condon himself asked the Secretary to have an exhaustive investigation made of his character and conduct. The result of that investigation was a [illegible] report by the Commerce Department Loyalty Board that "no reasonable grounds exist for believing that Dr. Condon is disloyal to the Government of the United States." This report, it seems to us, is the definitive answer to the Thomas Committee's demand for Dr. Condon's immediate dismissal or an explanation of why he is being retained. The explanation is altogether clear. What is still to be explained—what Congress owes it to the American people to explain without delay—is why it permits a committee acting in its name so meanly and groundlessly to defame an American citizen.

China Plea

The campaign for military aid to Chiang Kai-shek in his grapple with the Chinese Communists is being pushed relentlessly. The latest witness in behalf of it is General Wedemeyer. General Wedemeyer's testimony should be put side by side with the opposing testimony of Secretary Marshall. Mr. Marshall in reply to Representative Douglas said:

> You must have effective leadership—a leadership which doesn't lose morale by its characteristics.

Questioned by Representative Judd, Secretary Marshall said:

> I tried to make them do, continually and persistently, what they could have done any day in the week: train those boys before they put them into divisions. What happens is that a farm boy is given a rifle and put into action sometimes within 24 hours of the time he arrives there. This is a fatal defect of the Chinese fighting force, aside from leadership, at the present time.

Later on Secretary Marshall said:

> I am talking about the organization and fighting capacity which are fundamental to any campaign. You cannot hope to win unless you have a solid bottom on which to start. You must have that first. And you must have leadership first. These are the two fundamentals [that are lacking]. It has not been because of advice. Advice has been continually and emphatically ignored.

These arguments, to our way of thinking, are irresistible. Lack of training and lack of leadership explain the reverses that the government armies have sustained in the conflict with the Chinese Communists. These are so serious that Manchuria is now in peril. The Nationalist armies appear to be more or less marooned in such mainline towns as Mukden, Changchun and Kiriu. At several points their line of retreat along the railroad to Tientsin has been cut, and Yungkow, the only available Manchurian port, is said to have been invested. It is here that the deficiencies of leadership have been most manifest. In this respect the fundamental flaw was the dispatch to the north of generals who were not congenial to the local population. The Manchurians are the most particularistic folk in all China. When Chiang's generals from middle and southern China came north, they were regarded, in the habitual language of the Manchurians, as "southern barbarians." They thus got the minimum cooperation; indeed, there was opposition. At last the generalissimo is being besought by what the Associated Press calls "the old Manchurian generals and elder statesmen in Nanking" to release Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang from surveillance in Formosa, and send him back to Manchuria "in a prominent position of trust." This should have been done when the campaign was launched. Marshal Chang is far from a military genius, but at least he is a Manchurian, and might have rallied the Manchurians against the Communists. The 1000-strong American military mission in Nanking must have been presenting the same suggestion to Chiang Kai-shek for a long time.

It is because of these deficiencies of which Secretary Marshall spoke that arms aid would not help. Indeed, it would make matters worse, for the undertrained and unenthusiastic men in the government, or Nationalist, armies have become carriers of American arms to the Communists. Thus the program that is now suggested would actually aid the Communists, aside from alienating the people of China, who are calling a plague on the houses of both sides. Without a doubt General Wedemeyer has worked well with the Chinese. But we doubt whether even if General Wedemeyer were asked by Chiang Kai-shek to be commander in chief, he would fare much better than did General "Chinese" Gordon of subsequent Khartoum fame who, in the T'aiping Rebellion in China a hundred years ago, quit the government forces in disgust when his advice was "continually and emphatically ignored."

Hope For DPs

At last the log jam on displaced persons legislation appears to be broken. The bill reported out by the Senate Judiciary Committee is, of course, pitifully—indeed shamefully—inadequate. The greatest and wealthiest nation on earth can scarcely discharge its share of the world's responsibilities toward the 850,000 refugees still left in the displaced persons camps of Europe by granting grudging admittance to a mere 100,000 over a two-year period. Senator Ferguson has every argument of justice and humanity on his side in demanding that the quota be doubled to admit 100,000 a year, or a total of 200,000 for the two-year period. This would bring the measure into at least partial conformity with his own bill introduced last year and with the Stratton bill in the House which would admit a total of 400,000 over a four-year span.

Senator McGrath, working in bi-partisan harmony with Senator Ferguson to advance a cause which certainly ought to be above politics, has exposed the harassing restrictions with which the Judiciary Committee loaded its bill. To require that persons may be admitted to this country only if they have a vocation "needed" here and only if they are able to find "decent, safe and sanitary housing without displacing some other person" is to make the measure administratively unworkable and to hold out to the most tragic of the war's victims a hope devoid of substance. But such defects can be corrected by amendment in the course of Senate debate. We have no doubt that when the aroused conscience of Congress is at last allowed to come to grips with this problem, it will meet it in accordance with the American tradition of generosity to the homeless and the oppressed.

Steel On The Defensive

Testifying last Tuesday before the Joint Economic Committee, Benjamin F. Fairless, president of United States Steel Corp., and Arthur B. Homer, president of Bethlehem Steel Co., paid lip service to the thesis that the public interest should be considered when price changes are made. However, their defense of the recently announced steel price increases was based on the customary argument that rising production costs necessitated price increases. Particular stress was put on the fact that semifinished steel, of which only a limited amount is sold to outside concerns, had been selling below production costs, while prices ruling for tubular goods and structural steel (also advanced in price) had failed to yield satisfactory profits. Mr. Fairless was so concerned about rising production costs, indeed, as to declare that his company was a "victim of inflation," despite the fact that its net income for 1947 exceeded that of any year since 1929.

Senator Taft and other committee members pointed out that if the prices charged for the particular products subject to price increases had previously been too low to yield satisfactory returns, the returns from other products at existing price levels must be extraordinarily high. Nevertheless, suggestions that announced price increases might be offset by decreases in prices of other steel products met with no favor. Mr. Fairless and Mr. Homer were obsessed by fears of future cost increases, and both of them emphasized in particular the danger of a third round of wage increases that would give another twirl to the inflationary spiral. They seemed blissfully unaware that their own ill-timed decision to raise prices would, as Senator Taft pointed out, encourage not only the steel workers but other labor unions to press their wage demands. Both witnesses discounted the moral effect of the price policies adopted by the great corporations they represent. Both emphasized the allegedly insignificant effect on prices and living costs of so-called corrective price increases. Yet, by persistent questioning, the record showed that the recent price increases apply to about 25 per cent of United States Steel production and are expected to add a large sum to the company's profits.

The whole tenor and tone of the discussion showed that the spokesmen for steel were singularly lacking in appreciation of their responsibility as heads of a basic industry for formulating their policies with a view to the public interest instead of thinking solely in terms of costs and profits. As Senator Flanders observed, everyone can find good arguments in support of price increases or wage increases at a time of mounting inflation. The steel industry has offered a technically fair defense of its position. We daresay when the steel workers come along with demands for wage increases they, too, will find good arguments, based on living cost figures and steel profits, for supporting their demands. In fact, this type of argument can go on endlessly, adding fuel to inflation until the explosion point is reached. If the steel industry, instead of drifting with the tide, had decided to resist the trend, and try to hold the price line firm, its action would, we believe, have strengthened the forces that are fighting inflation.

Social Security

The Gearhart bill passed by the House on Friday would have the effect of denying protection under the old age and survivors insurance program of the Social Security Act to about 500,000 to 750,000 employes and their dependents whom the Supreme Court recently held to be entitled to such protection. The employes involved are so-called "outside workers"—salesmen and others working on a commission basis or under contract—who, although perhaps not employes in the narrow, old-fashioned sense of the term, are nevertheless dependent upon "employers" for their livelihoods. The pending bill would nullify the Supreme Court's decisions and invite endless litigation over definition of the term "employe" in respect not only of the Social Security Act but doubtless of the Fair Labor Standards Act as well.

The expressed purpose of the bill, according to its title, is "To maintain the status quo in respect of certain employment taxes and social security benefits pending action by Congress on extended social security coverage." It would do this by excluding from coverage anyone who is not an "employe" under the "usual common law rules applicable in determining the employer-employe relationship." But as the minority members of the Ways and Means Committee pointed out in their report, the title is grossly misleading; so far from maintaining the status quo, the measure would deny coverage to persons assured it by judicial interpretation of the Social Security Act.

This would be a contraction of the act running directly counter to the expansion of its protection which Congress ought to legislate without any more delay. As President Truman said when he vetoed a similar bill last summer, it "proceeds in a direction which is exactly opposed to the one our Nation should pursue . . . We must not open our social security structure to piecemeal attack and to slow undermining. We must, instead, devote our energies to expanding and strengthening that system."

"Weak Electoral System"

I must take issue with a portion of your very interesting editorial of February 29 on the electoral system. I disagree with your conclusion that the Constitution should be amended to provide for virtually direct popular election of the President. But you are wrong in stating that it would be consistent with the letter and intent of the Constitution for the Commonwealth of Virginia to allow persons who are not Democrats to be candidates on the Democratic ticket for the posts of presidential electors. The Constitution states nothing at all about the use of party labels on ballots.

If the Democratic Party has selected a candidate for the Presidency through its regular convention procedures, anyone who runs for the post of presidential elector under the designation of Democrat is automatically representing to the voters that he will cast his electoral vote in accordance with the selection of the Democratic Party's regular convention. I am sure that any unbiased court would hold that the person running for office under the label "Democrat" is wilfully intending that the voters should vote for him upon that assumption. If that assumption is false, the candidate for presidential elector is committing perjury.

The Constitution provides for the election of the President by presidential electors but it does not provide for the election of presidential electors under false pretenses. The Constitution further provides (as interpreted in the Hayes-Tilden contest) that Congress determines the validity of each electoral vote cast. It would be the plain duty of Congress to reject any electoral vote cast by a perjured elector who had been elected as an elector under a falsely assumed party label.

HERBERT J. WEBER.
Washington.

Editor's note: We did not, of course, assume that Virginia could constitutionally elect presidential electors under the false pretense that they would vote for President Truman and then have them vote for some other candidate. The editorial question only made the point that Virginia is free to choose uninstructed electors, as that was the original intent of the founding fathers.

Palestine Policy

Today the new United States policy on Palestine stands naked for all the world to see. Stripped of its regard for decency and sympathy for human suffering; only flimsily clothed in legalistic hocus-pocus, it is revealed as a policy born of hope, but now so distorted and perverted by the "realistic" militarists and their Wall Street helpers as to burden all Americans with a deep sense of shame.

While the Arabs openly threaten large-scale attacks on the Jewish community, while the British state that their "embargo" is ineffective to prevent shipment of arms under existing contracts to these threatening Arabs, while Palestine witnesses daily acts of violence and reprisal; we see no "threat to the peace" of sufficient gravity to justify immediate action by the United Nations to enforce its partition decision.

Instead, we recommend more debate, further investigation of the problem—the same that has been interminably debated and investigated while human beings, for want of a home among friends, have been subjected to unending debasement, finding their only relief in death in hostile lands.

Mr. Austin, speaking at Lake Success with President Truman's support, seeks refuge for our position in the language of the U. N. Charter. The Charter was no bar to our taking unilateral action in Greece and Turkey. If we are sincere in our oft-stated desire to foster the growth of the international organization, if we are to dispel the suspicion that the Charter is raised as an obstacle only when the issue involved and the remedial measures required do not strengthen our strategic position in the "cold war," the new Palestine policy must be repudiated.

Those people in Palestine who support the U. N. decision must be given aid "in the spirit" of the Charter. At least, the farcical arms embargo should be lifted.

ALVIN SINDERBRAND.
Washington.

Bus Baths

Within the past week two letters concerning the cleanliness of our vehicles have appeared in your paper.

During the bad weather of the past two months, particularly in the latter part of January and early February, it has been difficult to keep our streetcars and buses clean. They got dirty as fast as we could wash them. During the first two months of this year we washed a total of 11,650 buses and streetcars, a record number.

Ordinarily, cars and buses go through the washers on regular schedules, but when we have bad weather, they're put through as often as possible.

Tuck's "Blank Check"

In 1945 it was my privilege to manage the campaign of Moss A. Plunkett for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Virginia in opposition to William M. Tuck. Mr. Tuck followed a policy of silence until forced to utter some platitudes as a result of our vigorous efforts to "Make Tuck Talk." The Byrd machine rallied the faithful and, with the aid of such vote-counting scandals as were revealed in Wise County, won the nomination for Tuck.

Riding high now, with undisputed control of the General Assembly, the machine, through Governor Tuck, has now demanded that Virginians be utterly stripped of their right to vote for presidential candidates of their own choosing. In effect it is demanded that they sign a blank political check and hand it over to the Byrd machine.

There may be time yet for Virginians to voice their protests to members of the Legislature. But if this nefarious legislation is enacted, untold thousands will certainly swear a mighty oath to do as requested by the distinguished editor of the Richmond News-Leader, Dr. Douglas S. Freeman, who writes: "Make a solemn vow this day that you never again will vote for any man, for any office at any time, if he is party in the General Assembly or in the State Democratic machine to limiting in any manner or degree your complete freedom to vote as you please!" America And European Union

The rising tide of United States talk in favor of a European federation should make Burton K. Wheeler, former Senator from Montana, very happy indeed. Several years before Governor Dewey, Mr. Wheeler was urging European union. When Congress was going overwhelmingly for the Fulbright and Connally resolutions on world organization, Senator Wheeler was talking European union. He was talking it even before that, when no one else in the United States of his stature was advocating it.

Mr. Churchill and others now advocate western European union as a defense against Soviet Russia. In the years when they were paying no mean tributes to the Kremlin, Senator Wheeler left no doubt that he deemed Moscow a menace to freedom against which western Europe should federate. Unlike many of the present followers, Senator Wheeler was not ambiguous about what he meant by a "union" of Europe. He did not use the term so loosely that it might mean anything from a bloc or alliance of nations to a real federal union. He made it clear that he had in mind a federal government, such as that of the United States.

All this is fresh in my mind, for in that period I commended the Senator on this readiness to federate at least some nations. He invited me to lunch; we had a long and friendly discussion.

I knew of Senator Wheeler's passionate devotion to human freedom and the principles of the United States Constitution. I thought that since he was in favor of federating Europe for freedom's sake, I might persuade him that freedom required even more, that we Americans should federate with western Europe and the British democracies.

I tried to make him see that whereas it was laudable that Europeans should advocate European union and should hesitate to urge Americans to federate with them, however much they desired this, we Americans put the United States in a bad moral position when we urged Europeans to do what we, the most experienced and powerful of federal unions, were unwilling to do with them.

I sought to convince him that European union was, on balance, dangerous to freedom since it prolonged the basic division between the land of the free in America and in Europe that had already produced two world wars and a world depression, I failed.

In those days Senator Wheeler was generally rated isolationist No. 1, at least in the fear his debating powers inspired in the internationalist camp. Those who were then promising enduring peace if only the United States would enter "some kind of world organization," did not take so kindly as I did to Senator Wheeler's talk of European union. They thought a shrewd politician was preparing a red herring that might well divert the United States from doing its duty. To them—then—European union seemed Machiavellic isolationism.

For what could appeal more than this to all three pillars of isolationist support—the escapist pillar, the spread-eagle pillar and the anti-British-and-Europe pillar? Certainly by a policy of European union the United States would escape responsibility, while enjoying the satisfaction of either seeing its federal principles adopted by others or, in the event of a failure, confirming the view that the British and Europeans are hopeless.

Most of the United States internationalists who are now urging European rather than transatlantic union have neglected, no doubt, to think this policy through. But if they still favor it, fairness should suggest to them that they apologize to Mr. Wheeler for their criticisms of him and recognize him as their first prophet.

For my part, I shall continue to urge the United States to federate with the other democracies. But if it should turn out that European union is all that Secretary Marshall was aiming it when he spoke of "Federal Union" in his Utah speech of July 14, 1947, and if Governor Dewey and the other Republican backers of European union get their resolutions through Congress, or in the Republican platform, well my regrets will be addressed to the Secretary and to the Republican leadership. My congratulations to the . . . temporary . . . winner will go to Burton K. Wheeler.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Vandenberg Vs. Ball

WASHINGTON.—Two men in the Senate of the United States offer a remarkable study in contrast. They stand out against the harsh glare of swiftly moving history like the figures in a medieval morality play.

One, it is hardly necessary to say, is Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan. The tribute that the Senate paid him, when he finished his speech opening the debate on the European Recovery Program, was the kind of thing that comes rarely in any man's career in Congress. It was a recognition, disregarding for the moment political and ideological differences, of a great achievement.

The other man is Senator Joseph H. Ball of Minnesota, who seems to have made himself the leader of the opposition to ERP. It is not open and avowed opposition. That would not succeed, because public opinion has come around so completely to acceptance of the need to try to restore western Europe.

It is more complicated than that. Senator Ball says cut the program from 5.3 billion dollars to—oh, let's say three and a half billions or maybe four billions. He says this in spite of the careful studies that have been made—by the Harriman Committee, for example. He says this despite Secretary of State George C. Marshall's warning that such a cut would reduce the whole business to a mere breadline, barring any hope of rehabilitation and recovery.

IN THE morality plays of the Middle Ages, the leading characters were always labeled. They were virtue, vice, malice, envy, lust. Our time is perhaps too complicated for such simple labels. If you had to apply tags to two such contrasting personalities and performances as those of Vandenberg and Ball, maturity and immaturity might fit as well as anything else. That, it seems to me, is the real meaning of Vandenberg's achievement—maturity.

It does not seem very long ago that the Senator from Michigan was a carefree party-goer in party-going Washington. His ideological coloration was that of his region—isolationism with a mixture of indifference. No one doubted his ability. But he coasted along pleasantly and he rarely had to extend himself.

World War II brought to him an understanding of what the weapons of modern destruction meant. It brought maturity and a crushing sense of personal responsibility. Once, at Lake Success, during an interval in a United Nations session, he said to me:

"I never dreamed I would come to accept the weight of responsibility that I feel today. And if I had thought it would be anything like this, I'm afraid I might have turned my back on it."

But the point is he didn't turn his back. Politically speaking, Senator Vandenberg is a conservative. He is a conservative in the truest sense of the word. That is to say, he believes in trying to conserve what is best in our system in the face of the revolutionary changes that are blowing across the world.

IN 1944, Senator Ball bolted the Republican Party and came out for President Roosevelt's election to a fourth term. He said he was doing this on the issue of foreign policy and the vigorous prosecution of the war. By taking this step he greatly embarrassed Harold Stassen, who first appointed him to the Senate.

Today his objective seems to be to erase any thought that he ever favored Roosevelt or the policies of Roosevelt. After all, he does have the problem of getting re-elected in November on the Republican ticket.

But this gives to his course a curious zigzag effect. When he was a working newspaperman at the time of the formation of the American Newspaper Guild, Ball was one of the red-hots who wanted to demand that employers negotiate every conceivable circumstance and condition. Yet when the Taft-Hartley law was being debated, he took such an extreme position that Stassen could not go along with him.

Perhaps the zig and the zag in Ball's career can be put down to the process of growing up. He is 20 years younger than Senator Vandenberg.

The maturing process does, however, seem to be a little drawn out, particularly in view of the state of the world. The kind of immaturity exhibited in the Senate, where every kind of irrelevant proposal is thrown in with ERP, thus insuring delays, conflicts, and confusion, is a perilous extravagance in the face of the threat to this Nation's security. If anyone is seeking a model of maturity, there is Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan.

Auto Tag Wait

Anyone of the hundreds who stood in line and waited two and three hours for their auto tags is personally aware of the lack of organization, bordering on sheer incompetence, within the licensing organization.

It is nothing new. Every year is the same. A busy citizen wastes a full day or part of two being herded from window to window without any semblance of a first-come-first-served order being maintained.

The incompetence is at the top. Perhaps that particular salary is not sufficient to attract a suitable supervisor. In that case, steps should be taken by the Senate and House District Committees to raise that salary. But if the collective citizenry is paying an adequate salary for a responsible job, it should see that it gets value for its money rather than blindly rewarding incompetence. Or will it be the same next year?

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

The Military Phase Begins

WASHINGTON.—The Soviet-western conflict is now clearly passing into a new and perhaps decisive phase. Phase one was the period of American self-delusion—a phase of appeasement toward the Soviet Union. Phase two was a period of awakening—a phase of attempts to halt Soviet imperialism by political and economic measures, culminating in the European Recovery Program. Phase three will be a military phase marked by defensive pacts, military basing arrangements and coordination of war plans throughout the non-Soviet world.

The first major measure of this new phase is likely to be what amounts to a defensive alliance between the western European powers and the United States. Just what form this arrangement may take is still uncertain. There is also disagreement within the Administration as to whether the initiative should be left to the Europeans or should be taken by us. The important fact remains that remarkable unanimity has suddenly appeared on all levels of American policy-making, as to the need for an American-European alliance of some sort.

THIS IS A logical sequel to recent events. The actual beginning of the new phase in the Soviet-western conflict must be traced to British Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin's call for a union of western Europe. Bevin's bold proposal was put forward with some haste because the British government had secret advance intimations of the Soviet plans for Czechoslovakia and Finland. It was welcomed particularly warmly at the State Department. It has now been given strong impetus by the actual occurrence of the rape of Czechoslovakia, and the beginning of the attack on Finland. In fear and dismay, most western European leaders are now pressing for immediate realization of the Bevin idea.

In the course of the preliminary discussions, however, several of the western European leaders, and especially Premier Spaak of Belgium, have pointed out that a union of western Europe no longer would be strong enough. The Soviets would not be impressed by any mere grouping of states militarily and economically exhausted by the war. In order to make the proposed union truly effective, the United States would have to join the party, at least to the extent of joining in military and strategic planning and adding American strength to the pool.

This point of view was relayed back to Washington some time ago, and met with a friendly response here.

While the mode of procedure is still unsettled, the American policy-makers seem to be pretty well agreed on what they ultimately want. Broadly speaking, the desired blueprint is for a western European union, reinsured militarily by the United States with a European-American combined staff to do the homework. This would be, in effect, a military-strategic copy of the pattern of economic cooperation already laid down by the Marshall Plan.

THE DEVELOPMENT of such a new pattern would obviously solve many pressing problems of a practical nature which are difficult for this country to deal with on a unilateral basis. Cooperation among all the nations along the Atlantic seaboard should provide an easy solution for the question of Iceland and Greenland bases, now in dispute with Iceland and Denmark. It should remove the remaining Portuguese objections to the strategic use of the Azores. It should make it possible to reach agreements with France and Belgium concerning the defense of North Africa and the Belgian Congo. It should permit coordination of American and British strategic planning and political effort in all the many areas of joint interest.

Above all, development of this new pattern should make it possible to tackle the most basic of all problems from the European standpoint (those listed above are, after all, of primary interest to this country). This is the problem of the defense of Europe itself against Soviet aggression. Solution of this problem will lay the worst ghost now haunting European minds, of Soviet armies marching almost unopposed to the North Sea and the English Channel.

All this, to be sure, is reckoning without the inevitable slips between the cup and the lip. At the moment, for example, the French are having an acute attack of their neurosis about Germany, which is tragically natural, but now sadly out of date. French demands for extreme guaranties against the re-emergence of a German state are thus hampering the initial agreement between Britain, France and the Benelux countries, which is the necessary nucleus for any western European union.

Yet these difficulties, in the logic of the situation, are bound to prove temporary. Military measures to show a strong front against Soviet aggression are now clearly needed. They will, therefore, eventually be taken. American participation is needed to make those measures effective.

The United States will participate. The alternative is too clear and too grim to permit any other outcome.

Commodity Prices Regain Most of Losses of Month Ago

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Last night, just a month after the Nation's markets were rocked by one of the most spectacular price breaks in history, most grains, soybeans, cotton and other commodities had regained the greater part of their losses.

Wheat has been the slowest on the comeback. According to figures at the Commodity Exchange Authority, it has regained only 20 cents of its earlier losses of 57½ cents. On February 3, May wheat closed at $2.86½. It reached a low of $2.29 on February 13. Last night it closed at $2.49.

Corn had regained almost two thirds. Last night it was only 19 cents below the close on February 3—the day of the big break. On February 14 it had been 55 cents below.

Oats Near Former High

Oats were only 2⅝ cents a bushel below February 3—on February 13 they were 19⅝ cents below.

Soybeans were only 10 cents a bushel less than on February 3. On February 14 they were 61 cents below.

Cotton yesterday was about one-third of a cent a pound under February 3 prices. On February 11 cotton was almost four cents a pound under February 3.

Hogs and cattle both have made up much of their earlier declines. Top hogs went from about $27 a hundred pounds down to $22.75 on February 10. They are now back to about $24.

Cattle are more difficult to figure. Low grades are back to about the same prices as February 3. Top steers, however, are still below February 3—an Associated Press figure showing the decline averaging from $33 on February 3 to $29 today. On an average, cattle have gained about half their February losses.

The march back up towards the high levels of early February gained momentum yesterday as the result of the re-entry of the Government into the flour market on a large scale.

Late Wednesday Secretary of Agriculture Anderson announced that the Government wanted to buy flour equal to 9,300,000 bushels of wheat. It was the first Government purchase since February 3. The call for offers from millers, fixed delivery of the huge amount of flour for next week—an unusually short period.

May wheat yesterday opened up the full limit of 10 cents a bushel. Other grains advanced in sympathy.

However profit taking, which the spurt attracted, brought it back down. The close was 6¾ cents higher than Tuesday.

Corn futures were up to 1½ cents higher; oats up as much as 1⅜ cents, and soybeans from 2½ to 7 cents higher.

Demand Credited

One of the chief reasons advanced by grain experts for the steady rebound of grains has been heavier demand. Much of this increased demand is attributed to the lower prices.

The distilling industry for instance is using grain at the rate of eight million bushels a month, it was estimated at the Agriculture Department. In January under Government controls, only 2,500,000 bushels went into liquor making. Controls ended February 1. Efforts to reinstate them have been blocked in the House, where bills to restore allocations of grain to distillers have been pigeonholed in the Banking Committee.

Virtually every distillery in the country is now nearing capacity production. Several held back early in February, as the result of (1) an appeal from President Truman to limit grain consumption to the January figure of 2,500,000 bushels a month, and (2) an appeal from the Distilled Spirits Institute to limit grain consumption to half the rate of a year ago. The DSI proposal would have held consumption down to less than four million bushels a month.

Jury in GSI Assault Case Fails to Agree

A Municipal Court case of a woman striker accused of assaulting another woman reporting for work in one of the struck GSI cafeterias resulted yesterday in a hung jury.

In another case of picket line violence, a 65-year-old man pleaded guilty of carrying a deadly weapon while escorting his wife to work through a cafeteria picket line.

Earmarked now for retrial is the case of Miss Lillie Mae James, 31, 925 M st. nw., who was charged with pushing the nonstriker, Miss Geneva Twyman, 32, 736 Harvard st. nw. The incident occurred, police testified, when Miss Twyman crossed the picket line January 15 at the Navy Building cafeteria, 18th st. and Constitution ave. nw.

Jury Out for Hour

The jury deliberated about an hour before reporting to Judge Ellen K. Raedy that it was "hopelessly deadlocked." The trial must now be reassigned on next month's docket.

Miss James, one of about 1000 GSI workers picketing 40 Federal building cafeterias, denied on the witness stand that she "ever raised a hand" against Miss Twyman. She said she may have been pushed against the complainant when a policeman grabbed her.

Pleading guilty to the deadly weapon charge in Judge John P. McMahon's court was William E. Louder, 1444 W st. nw. He allegedly took out the pistol when two strikers tried to persuade his wife from entering the Navy Department cafeteria January 12.

Judge McMahon referred his case to the probation officer preparatory to sentencing March 13. Louder faces a maximum sentence of a $1000 fine and a year in jail.

Two women strikers and one nonstriker have been convicted thus far in picket line violence cases in the 60-day-old strike. Three more cases, involving eight strikers are pending.

Meanwhile, Conciliator George E. Strong has been discussing with both sides a settlement proposal he made on Tuesday. But neither Strong, GSI, or Local 471 of the CIO Cafeteria Workers would say whether there has been any reaction.

The union, which called the walkout because of GSI's refusal to bargain, has begun contract negotiations for some 50 other of its members working for the M & M Corp., operators of four cafeterias for the Navy Department. Union Business Agent Oliver T. Palmer said the management has not raised the issue GSI raised—union failure to file Taft-Hartley non-Communist affidavits.

Pre-Vote Pact On Union Shop Gets Approval

Employers are at liberty to enter into contracts for a union shop, but the union shop cannot become effective until it has been authorized by an employe election.

This was an opinion issued yesterday by Robert N. Denham, general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board. In effect, his decision was an authorization to permit "conditional" union shop agreements, subject to later employe authorization.

The Taft-Hartley Act forbids closed shop contracts, under which the union does the hiring and recruits only from union members. But the law permits union shop contracts, under which all employes hired must become members of the union after 30 days, if such an arrangement is favored by a majority of workers in a secret election.

Denham said that in this period, with many contracts coming up for renewal, he had been bombarded with questions as to what kind of an agreement for union security could be entered into in advance of NLRB action on petitions for union shop elections. As of the end of January there were 2814 petitions for union shop polls pending.

Denham replied to the inquiries by saying that no union security provisions could be enforced until an election had authorized the union shop provision. But, he added, there was no reason why an employer could not promise, in a contract signed in advance of the vote, to grant the union shop when and if it was authorized.

Another ruling yesterday, this time by the NLRB itself, dealt with the question of the anti-Communist affidavit provision of the new law.

The board said that if a union chose to amend its constitution, removing as "officers" certain individuals who refused to sign the oaths, and if its remaining officers did execute the affidavits, then the union was in compliance.

The question arose when a shoe manufacturing company pointed out that the CIO United Shoe Workers had certain officers who refused to sign. The union then changed its constitution, to reduce the number of officers. Those left signed the oaths. But, the company contended, the others still were acting in fact as officers.

Alaskan Statehood Bill Clears Subcommittee

By the United Press

The Territory of Alaska moved a short step nearer full membership in the Union yesterday when a House Public Lands Subcommittee unanimously approved a bill to admit it as a State.

The measure, sponsored by Alaskan Delegate E. L. Bartlett, must win approval of the full committee. Chairman Fred Crawford (R., Mich.) said it probably would come before the committee early in April.

A bill whicsh would grant Statehood to Hawaii already has been approved by the House but has not been acted on by the Senate.

Truman Indifference

Comment On The Tuck Plan

MOST OF the accounts of President Truman's press conference at Key West Monday subordinated what he said about the plan of Governor Tuck of Virginia to omit the names of presidential candidates from the ballots in November. At least two I have read seem to me to have missed the point of Mr. Truman's comment.

Lindley

After declining to comment on a general question about the Southern "revolt," Mr. Truman was asked specifically what he thought of the Tuck plan. He replied that every State had a right to decide how to conduct elections, provided that every voter had a chance to express his opinions at the polls. The latter clause was construed by some correspondents to mean "provided everybody has a chance to vote."

Mr. Truman, it seemed to me, meant more than that. He so indicated by his additional sentences on the subject. He recalled that until 1836, the presidential electors acted as free agents, but that since then they customarily have been instructed or committed. He said he thought the Tuck proposal was an effort to go back to the old system, which hadn't worked very well.

AN ELECTION in which a citizen does not know for whom he is voting for President when he puts a cross before the name of an elector is obviously not one in which he has a chance to express an opinion. This is the point which, I think, Mr. Truman intended to make. He may have had in mind the further point that the voters in every State should have the right to vote for the properly chosen presidential nominees of national parties.

The Tuck plan has undergone some changes since it was first announced. At this writing, it appears to make provision for tying the Democratic candidates for the electoral college in Virginia to a specific presidential candidate. The choice apparently is to be made by the Democratic State Committee. The fate of the proposal, even in amended form, seems to be in doubt.

Mr. Truman's comment was mild and, it must be admitted, not as clearcut as it might have been. Although the question surely was to be expected, his answer sounded as if it were "off the cuff." Even though he intended his comment to be soft, it should have been better thought out and phrased. He gave much the same impression in his answer to several other questions: that he hadn't been thinking very hard about political and public questions or that he didn't care too much what kind of impression he made.

PERHAPS THE Florida sunshine and his immediate mission—to get some rest—accounted for the impression he gave of relative indifference. Yet he seemed eager to dissipate the idea that he was not conducting the essential business of the Presidency. He spoke of his daily contacts with the State Department and his telephone conferences with most of the members of the Cabinet. Most of the principal members of his White House staff are at Key West with him. And they have been busy on the telephone to Washington.

Moreover, there was no particular reason for Mr. Truman to hold a press conference, except possibly as a courtesy to a few local correspondents who otherwise would not have had a chance to interview him. The questioning was conducted, however, by the Washington contingent, and they had to work hard to keep the conference going.

The presidential answer which most correspondents made the lead, after obtaining his permission to quote his exact language, concerned the bad influence of the presidential election on our approach to international and national problems. What he said was true, as all Washington observers know. But the day on which Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan was making one of the greatest of his speeches—also one of the greatest the Senate has heard in recent years—in bipartisan support of the European Recovery Program hardly was the appropriate time for such a comment from Mr. Truman.

Perhaps the answer is that Mr. Truman, beset by so many difficulties, has become too fatalistic to care much whether he is reelected President or not.

Truman Acts To Avert Atom Plant Strike

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Key West, Fla., March 4—President Truman went into action tonight to head off a threatened strike at the Government's Oak Ridge, Tenn., atomic energy plant.

He prepared to invoke the provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act to prevent a cessation of work by research employes, all of them members of the American Federation of Labor.

Cyrus S. Ching, head of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, has warned that a work stoppage in the Tennessee plant would have "grave national implications." Between 700 to 800 production workers and about 200 scientists are involved.

The course of action mapped out by Mr. Truman tonight was as follows:

1. On his return to Washington tomorrow afternoon, he will issue an executive order setting up a board of inquiry to investigate the Oak Ridge dispute. The board will be ordered to make its report by March 19 or earlier.

2. From Key West he has appealed to the Carbide and Carbon Chemical Corporation, which is operating the plant for the Government, and the Atomic Trades and Labor Council, AFL, to continue negotiations for a new contract until March 19.

(The union promptly announced in Washington it would comply with the President's request to remain on the job under present conditions until March 19.

The company representatives, headed by Silas Pickering 2d, were not immediately available for comment.)

He has also sent out telegrams to the Atomic Energy Commission and the Carbide and Carbon Chemical Corp. asking them to give assurances to employes that the present wage scale will be continued while the negotiations are going on. If the dispute is not composed by these means, the Government can go into court and apply for an injunction of 60 days' duration to delay the threatened strike that long.

The impasse at Oak Ridge, as explained here, grew out of a change of operating management. The Monsanto Chemical Co. had at one time been the operator; the Atomic Energy Commission transferred the management to the Carbide and Carbon Chemical Co.

This necessitated a new contract between the operating company and the AFL workers. Negotiations have been under way, with the Federal Mediation Service trying to bring about a settlement of differences.

As matters stood today, when President Truman took a hand, the company and the workers had given assurances that the status quo would be maintained only up to tomorrow night."

Chief Steward Arthur Prettyman, Mr. Truman's valet, was busy packing bags tonight for the return trip to Washington tomorrow.

The Presidential party will board the Sacred Cow at Boca Chica Airfield and take off for Washington at 9 a. m. The plane is scheduled to arrive at the Air Transport Command Field of the National Airport at 2 p. m.

Actually Mr. Truman's vacation ended today. He spent virtually the whole day at his desk in the "Little White House" here, working on documents that had come down from Washington and drafting a message he is to send to Congress in connection with the termination of the War Assets Administration.

The WAA automatically goes out of existence on June 30. Mr. Truman wants legislation to meet certain problems that will arise in the aftermath.

This afternoon the Chief Executive inspected the Marine detachment that has been guarding him here. He shook hands with each of the Leathernecks, 25 in all.

Fingerprint Test Ordered On Red Card

By The Associated Press

Congress called on the FBI yesterday for fingerprint tests of a Communist Party card allegedly issued to Herbert K. Sorrell in 1937 under the party name of "Herb Stewart."

Sorrell, president of the AFL Conference of Studio Unions, has sworn under oath before a House Labor Subcommittee that he was never a member of the Communist Party. The committee has been investigating movie labor troubles.

As Sorrell finished testifying that he had never seen or handled the Red membership certificate before, Representative Owens (R., Ill.) handed the card to him and asked him to examine it thoroughly.

Sorrell turned it over in his big fingers—he is a former prizefighter—and declared:

"I'd say it looks very much like my handwriting, but it is not my handwriting."

The witness acknowledged that his mother's maiden name was Stewart "and I suppose that's why they put it on there," he said.

Owens said that the word "Stewart" on the card starts out with the letters "So" with the small "o" written over by a "t."

"It looks like you started to write Sorrell and then wrote Stewart, doesn't it?" Owens asked.

"That's the way it looks," Sorrell agreed.

The witness then handed the card back to Chairman Kearns (R., Pa.), who told reporters that the FBI would make tests to see whether the card also bore any old fingerprints of Sorrell's.

"That way we can tell whether this card is a fake, as Sorrell claims," Kearns said. "He swore he never handled it before, and if the old prints are there it will be something else again."

Earlier the committee had heard a story of dynamiting by Chicago mobsters, skull-cracking and other violence in a Hollywood movie strike.

Sorrell told the committee that the trouble started after the arrival in Hollywood of Willie Bioff.

Bioff, a convicted panderer and extortionist, was Hollywood agent for George E. Browne, Chicago racketeer, when Browne was president of the AFL-International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes (IATSE). Sorrell's union group and the IATSE are the major antagonists in the current Hollywood labor controversy being investigated by the committee.

Sorrell went back to the 1941 strike by the Screen Cartoonists Guild against the Walt Disney Studios, and said:

"I was helping the cartoonists and Disney would never even meet with our collective bargaining agents. Instead, he went out and made a deal with Willie Bioff."

Capital Transit Omits Action On Dividend

By S. Oliver Goodman

Directors of Capital Transit Co. took no action yesterday on the quarterly dividend on common stock. The stock had been on a regular $2 annual dividend basis since 1942.

In announcing the omission, President E. D. Merrill stated: "The directors carefully considered payment of a dividend but decided to omit action at this time. It was hoped and expected by the board that means could be found to improve the financial condition of the company in the near future through increased revenue so as to overcome the present lack of a fair return on the property."

His statement was interpreted as meaning that Capital Transit soon will apply to the Public Utilities Commission for an increase in fares. A rate boost was granted last May by the PUC. This brought fares to 10 cents each from three for 25 cents and price of passes was raised from $1.25 to $1.50.

A wage increase followed that more than offset the higher fares. For 1947 the transit company reported a net deficit of $90,361, as compared with a net income of $914,528 in 1946.

When the last dividend was paid in January, the board pointed out that the disbursement was from previous year's earnings. The transit company had paid dividends in every year since its organization in December, 1933, with the exception of 1935, 1936, 1937 and 1938. One dollar was paid in 1934, 50 cents in 1939, $1 in 1940, $1.25 in 1941, $1.75 in 1942 and $2 since.

Illustrating the transit firm's fiscal plight are these figures from the latest annual report: Operating expenses in 1947 increased $2,300,893 while operating revenues were up $94,870.

Efforts to economize resulted in a 10 per cent decrease in bus and streetcar miles in January this year.

PRICES: Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food price index for this week is up 1.4 per cent, reversing a six-week downward trend . . . Westinghouse Electric Corp. cuts $10 to $20 off its refrigerator prices, effective March 15 . . . Leather prices at the New York Tanners Council show were 15 to 25 per cent lower than recent peaks. Dealers say this might reach retail shoe prices by fall.

FURNITURE TRENDS: Furniture prices should remain stable this year, Washington dealers were told by Leo Heer, executive vice president of the National Retail Furniture Association. Heer discounted the February commodity price break and said he saw no reason why it should influence furniture prices. Furniture prices today, he said, are at about the 1929-30 level and any rise in recent years has mostly wiped out the sharp cuts during the depression years. Presiding at the meeting of 54 local dealers in the Continental Hotel was Maurice Nee, past president of the Washington Retail Furniture Dealers Association. Hopeful factors in the furniture outlook, Heer said, were the boom in housing and the continued "tremendous" replacement demand.

RESERVES UP: Reserves of Lawyers Title Insurance Corp. of Richmond, which has a branch here at 923 15th st. nw., were increased about $500,000 during 1947 to $1,718,346. Capital was boosted $400,000 to $1,506,000. Total assets as of December 31, 1947, amounted to $4,422,781. Surplus was shown as $560,208.

ODD LOTS: President Alfred H. Smith of Citizens Bank of Riverdale, Md., reported yesterday that a new $140,000 capital stock issue was "substantially oversubscribed" . . . The Capitol School of Typewriter Mechanics is now located at 1328 New York ave. nw., in the General Electric Supply Building . . . Automotive News estimates that this week's auto output will total 102,670 units compared with 117,258 last week . . . Santa Fe Railway System reported its best peacetime freight traffic last year, but passenger revenue showed a 33 per cent drop.

EARNINGS: Santa Fe Railway reported net earnings of $47,743,244 for 1947, equal to $17.11 a common share, compared with $39,015,178 or $13.52 a share in the previous year. Other income reports follow:

WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, MARCH 5, 1948

Mary Haworth's Mail

Motherless Girl Has Hysteria for Two Days After Lover Drops Her; Neighbor Scares Her Out of It With Harsh Words; Was She Cruel?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Two nights ago I took a drastic stand in a certain situation and since then I have been sorry and ashamed, thinking maybe I should have been more sympathetic.

The problem revolves around a girl, 16, I'll call her Jane, whose mother died three years ago. Jane is the youngest of a family of 21 children who are scattered all over the country.

She lives with her father and two brothers, all of whom go their own way, as does Jane. She is supposed to have a heart condition. When faced with a distasteful task, she faints. For that reason she was permitted to stop school a year ago.

Now she has taken to drinking, smoking, keeping late hours and using foul language. She was having an affair with a boy who decided to drop her, whereupon she went into a tantrum that lasted two days. During this spell she kept banging her head against the headboard of the bed, saying she was going to kill herself.

Neighbor Felt Girl Was Faking

THEN she would leap out of bed and pretend to search for a knife, or run outside to throw herself in front of a car. I say "pretend" because she knew where the knives were, and when she ran outside, she just stood, taking no risks.

I was called in by her girl friends, who were huddled together, screaming at intervals. I have two young children, who were at home in their cribs unattended, and as I am pregnant, I wanted no tussle with Jane. There was nothing I could do for her that her girl friends couldn't do, and when her brother refused to call a doctor I became impatient and spoke my mind.

I told Jane if she wanted to kill herself, all right; but in the meantime she was harming everyone but herself; making everyone sick and tired; and that if she didn't quiet down I would see that she got institutional care.

Of course I was well aware that I had no authority in the situation; but I felt she was faking and I was anxious to get back to my children. Shortly after my speech I went home, and she recovered completely. But was I too harsh? What do you think? I am awaiting your opinion. J. S.

Hard-Hitting Words Helped

DEAR J. S.: A slap in the face, verbal or physical, sometimes snaps a hysterical person back to reality; and it seems you brought just the right treatment to bear on Jane's frenzy in this instance.

The fact that she promptly recovered (for the time being) proves that your harshness was good medicine in emergency; so what does it matter that your hard-hitting sanity was activated by wrath rather than sympathy?

A life-seasoned doctor, humanely aware of the sick-minded implications of Jane's self-pitying rampage, might have been equally tough in much the same words, by way of sobering her up to listen to reason, if he had been called to the rescue at that point.

So be at peace about your asperity. Evaluating the incident just of itself, one may hold it fortunate for Jane that you had other concerns on your mind at the moment; otherwise, you might

SNACK TIME: The lively Gaines quartette enjoys a mid-afternoon lunch of milk, bread, and peanut butter. Their mother, Mrs. Stanley Gaines, presides at the peanut butter jar. Menus for Healthy Youngsters

Busy Mother's Formula Provides Ample, Appetizing Meals in a Hurry

By Lucia Brown

SEVENTEEN square meals a day!

Planning, cooking and serving them in double quick time is one of the chief problems of petite Mrs. Stanley Gaines of Arlington, who leads a busy life as the mother of four lively youngsters.

There's never a dull moment with a quartette of children, all under 10, in the house. There's also not much time for quiet reflection on just what menus to serve, but Mrs. Gaines manages to conjure up meals that are ample, well-balanced, and appetizing, and won't make the food budget burst its seams.

Right now, she figures, it is costing around $23 to $25 a week to feed the family of six, a conservative sum in view of present high food prices. Silent testimony to the success of the diet she provides for her family is the fact that neither Jimmy, 9½; Donna, 7; Freddie, 4½; nor Lynn, 3, have had a real spell of sickness all winter.

Those 17 meals, by the way, are accounted for by the fact that she serves breakfast and dinner for six, has a noontime meal for four at home, and packs lunch for Jimmy to take to school. Mr. Gaines, who is an information specialist with the Department of Agriculture, lunches at the cafeteria there. But, besides regular meals, there are midafternoon snacks when the youngsters come in hungry from playing or schoo'.

Appetites Never Flag

Appetites never flag at the Gaines' house, which Mrs. Gaines believes is largely due to the fact that the children play outdoors so much of the time. Seven years ago Mr. and Mrs. Gaines built a home in suburban Arlington so their children have plenty of space for enjoying outdoor life.

Incidentally, although both Mr. and Mrs. Gaines are from South Dakota—he is from Minott and she from Hoople—they had to come to Washington to meet at a South Dakota dance. Pretty Mrs. Gaines is the daughter of the late Senator Lynn J. Frazier, who represented his State in Congress for 18 years. Mr. Gaines, a former South Dakota newspaperman, has been on the staff of the Office of Information at Agriculture for a number of years.

All the Gaines children are active youngsters with their own interests and hobbies. Jimmy, for instance, is a Cub Scout, a newspaper carrier boy, a member of the Y., and plays football. There's an electric train set up in the basement, a sandpile and slide in the back yard, and various pets, including a cat, goldfish, frogs and tadpoles, to keep the younger ones busy who haven't started to school.

Like most housekeepers, Mrs. Gaines has inaugurated a number of economy measures since food prices mounted—buying margarine instead of butter, for instance, and getting milk in cartons at the grocery instead of having it delivered. She keeps desserts simple because they are better for the children that way. Fruit and cookies are a favorite.

Dinner menus, as served during a recent week at the Gaines' house, follows:

SUNDAY
Cranberry Juice
(Poured from whole berry sauce)
Roast Chicken
Mashed Potatoes Gravy
Frozen Peas Celery
Frozen Custard
Homemade Devil's Food Cake
Milk Coffee

MONDAY
Tomato Juice
Chicken Sandwiches, with Lettuce and Mayonnaise
Cooked Carrots

TUESDAY

SATURDAY

Milk Coffee

The escalloped corn on Thursday's menu is an easy-to-make dish that was a favorite back in South Dakota. Canned corn and crumbled crackers are alternated in a baking dish. The top is dotted with margarine, milk is poured in to fill the dish, and it is then baked in the oven.

Lemon sponge is a dessert the children love and often ask for. Mrs. Gaines makes it by the following recipe:

LEMON SPONGE

1 lemon (both juice and grated rind)
1 cup white sugar
1 cup milk
¼ cup melted butter or margarine
2 eggs
2 tablespoons flour.

Mix dry ingredients, add lemon, slightly beaten yolk of egg, milk and melted butter. Fold in beaten egg whites. Bake in pan or individual cups, set in a pan of hot water, in a slow oven (325 degrees Fahrenheit) for about three-quarters of an hour.

Cookies served were Rocks, although Mrs. Gaines often uses time-saving bakery cookies. Almost any kind have to be kept under lock and key, or the youngsters will make themselves sick on them. A recipe for Rocks follows:

ROCKS

1 cup butter
1½ cups light-brown sugar
3 eggs
2¾ cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon salt
3 cups raisins, chopped
1 cup chopped walnuts
½ teaspoon soda

Cream the butter and sugar and add the well-beaten eggs. Sift together the flour, cinnamon, soda and salt, and reserve 1 cup of the flour to mix with the raisins and nuts. Mix all together. Place by spoonsful on a greased sheet and bake in a hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit) until lightly browned. (Since flour varies, it may be necessary to add more if cookies run while they're baking.)

Senorita Bernardino Given 'Woman of Americas' Award

By Genevieve Reynolds

Dynamic Senorita Minerva Bernardino of this city has just been selected the 1948 "Woman of the Americas." The hard-working chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women, who hails from the Dominican Republic, was given the honor by the United Women of America—a Pan American organization with affiliated branches in all the Central and South American countries.

Only two other women have been given the award, Chile's famous poet and feminine Consul to San Francisco, Gabriela Mistral, and the late Carrie Chapman Catt, this country's outstanding feminist leader. Miss Mistral was chosen "Woman of the Americas" in 1946 and Mrs. Catt in 1947. During the war Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was decorated by UWA at a luncheon in the Mayflower Hotel here.

SENORITA BERNARDINO

Mrs. Louisa Frias de Hembel, president of United Women of the Americas, wrote to Senorita Bernardino, "In selecting you, the organization has taken into consideration the many years of valuable work devoted to the improvement of the civil, social and political status of women . . . and for your untiring efforts to make women an intergal part of humanity."

Distinguished Suffragette

One of Latin America's most distinguished suffragettes, affable Minerva has fought smoothly but stubbornly for women's equal rights around the world. As Dominican delegate to the United Nations, she plays an active role in all questions pertaining to the "gentler sex." She has been known on several occassions to lock horns with Soviet women representatives around U. N. headquarters, particularly when they cast aspersions on Latin senoritas and senoras.

Minerva went up to New York yesterday to accept personally the UWA's nomination. And come May the organization will honor her with a reception or banquet in Manhattan. Simultaneously Latin American branches will hold similar celebrations to pay her homage.

Later this month she will be off to Bogota to attend the ninth Conference of Inter-American States.

Chinese Educator To Be Interviewed

Dr. James Yen, noted director of the mass education movement in China, will be featured in a celebrity-interview party on Monday, March 8, in the Palladian Room of the Shoreham Hotel.

The event is sponsored by the United Service of China with Mrs. Frederick H. Brook, chairman, presiding.

Dr. Yen will be introduced by United States Supreme Court Justice William Douglas who has described the work being done by this pioneer educator, who taught 27 million illiterate Chinese to read, "as the most important single job in the world."

The tea will be open to the public and reservations may be made by calling the Palladian Room at the Shoreham Hotel.

Your Questions On Homemaking

I have burned foods in some of my saucepans and it seems that once having been burned, the saucepans have a stubborn tendency to continue to burn foods. Is there any special treatment to remedy this? H. K. F.

If the bottom surface of the saucepan has become scratched or roughened during scouring, food will more readily stick to it in the future. To smooth the surface, scour the pan with very fine steel wool and a mild abrasive. In the future when food sticks, before scouring allow the pan to soak long enough to soften the deposit. This will cut down the scouring needed. Time and effort will be saved, if when putting on food to cook, you plan to stay in the kitchen until the food starts to boil, then immediately lower the burner to a point to just maintain boiling. The food will cook as rapidly, fuel will be saved and the chance for water boiling out of the kettle will be much lessened—thus decreasing the chance of the food burning.

Will you help me out on a luncheon I am giving for 12 ladies. Can I make patty shells at home for creamed chicken? If not, where can I purchase some? I would appreciate a recipe for creamed chicken and what to serve with it. My budget is very limited, but it is my turn and I want to serve as nice a luncheon as possible. F. S.

A patty shell which is very delicious with creamed chicken and which can be easily made at home is made by using your favorite pie crust recipe. Roll the dough ⅛-inch thick, just as you would for making pie. Using a saucer or similar dish, cut circles from the dough. Mold these circles of crust onto the backs of large-size muffin pans. Prick with a fork and bake as you would a pie shell. If you wish to buy puff patty shells, order them several days in advance of your party at a bakery. Most bakeries make these on special order only.

For a very substantial luncheon with your creamed chicken in patty shells you could serve a hot vegetable, such as buttered beans, peas or broccoli, a salad, rolls and dessert. For salad, a mixed fruit salad in a lettuce cup, or a cinnamon apple stuffed with cream cheese also in a lettuce cup would be delicious with chicken and colorful.

For dessert, serve ice cream and cookies, gingerbread and whipped cream, fruited tapioca pudding, or a slice of homemade cake.

To make the creamed chicken: Make a medium thick white sauce using part or all chicken broth for the liquid. Add the diced chicken removed from the bones. If you wish, in addition to the chicken you can add diced green pepper, pimento, sliced egg and (or) mushrooms. Any one or combination of the above is delicious with chicken. Serve in the patty shells.

My husband and I are adopting a baby soon and I wonder if you could print a list of the various articles of clothing and other

Silver Grows More Beautiful With Daily Use and Care

"There is no doubt at all that your silver not only grows more beautiful with use but requires far less care," says House and Garden Magazine, which offers the following tips on silver care:

"Like any other regular domestic chore, the care of silver should be routine. It should be kept as airtight as possible, either in silver drawers or special chests lined with tarnish-resistant fabric, or you may keep it in treated bags, cloths or tissue which guard against tarnish.

"Salt, salt air speed tarnish; so do winter's smoke, steam heat, leakage from gas heating systems. Sulphurous foods, such as eggs, and the acids in vinegar and mayonnaise will stain. Another foe of silver is rubber.

Use Deters Tarnish

"Tarnish is easier to control if it is cleaned away in its early stages. This is why regular use of your silver, with the friction inevitable in handling and washing, acts as a tarnish deterrent.

"The daily regime for silver is simple. Try to rotate your pieces, so that each has its turn in use. This keeps each article bright and also evens the patina, that luster which years of use and care give to silver . . . As soon as possible after a meal, wash your silver in hot soapy water by itself. After rinsing it thoroughly in very hot water, dry it while it is warm with a soft, absorbent cloth . . .

The Polishing Kit

"Your silver polishing kit should contain a cream or liquid polish sponge, clean flannel, chamois, a soft brush and an orange stick. Use the polish your jeweler or the silversmiths recommend. There are a number of excellent ones.

Practice Is Trick of Making Good Rolls

Professional-looking rolls can be turned out in the simplest kitchen by a homemaker who's willing to practice a bit. The basic flour yeast dough is easy to make—the practice comes in shaping rolls. Cloverleaf rolls are made by forming bits of dough into balls, dipping each into melted fat and placing two or three in each muffin cup. To make crescents, roll ball of dough into a circle about one-fourth-inch thick. Cut into pie-shaped pieces and roll up, beginning at the wide end. Curve into crescents on greased baking sheet. Long rolls of dough can be tied into bow knots or braided together to make rolls with all the characteristics of the picture-book product.

Tell-Tale Negative Sought

Red Writer Turns Vert At Dr. Slavik's Coup Before the News Cameras

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

TUESDAY Dr. Juraj Slavik resigned his post as Ambassador to fight for a free Czechoslovakia. True to form, within a few hours Communist-controlled Prague radios blared, stigmatizing him as the man who betrayed his country. Dr. Slavik, an intimate of Czech President Benes, until the last moment believed the Communist coup would be postponed as long as the seriously ailing President lived. So plans for announcing his resignation were hastily made.

When the press was called in, no one was sure just what the Ambassador was up to, some believed he would stay on with the new regime. Waiting for the reporters to gather, a photographer asked permission to take a picture. He wanted a group, so a man from one of the big news services stepped close, then the reporter from the Daily Worker hustled over to Dr. Slavik. The picture was snapped.

Then the Ambassador, denouncing the Communists, angrily announced his resignation. The Daily Worker minion, aghast because the photograph would compromise his Red standing, turned vert with annoyance—and is doing his darndest to get his hands on the tell-tale negative.

Prince Mihai's Statement

THE Red bugaboo is working overtime in Europe's capitals. When King Mihai of Romania arrived in Switzerland he was forbidden to make any statement to the press. So, in Paris, before sailing for this country on the Queen Elizabeth, he planned to make a declaration stating his abdication was Communist forced, that he intended to fight for throne and country. But Foreign Minister Bidault, with Communists snapping at his heels, refused to let the King speak. That's why his declaration was made yesterday in England rather than in France, the traditional refuge of all political exiles.

Dinner With the Soviets

THE Soviet Embassy hasn't been doing much entertaining this year. But by chance, a day or two after the Czechoslovak coup, Ambassador Panyushkin invited one of the State Department's Assistant Secretaries, several division heads and other department toilers to dinner.

Some 40 sat down to caviar, vodka, overdone filet mignon, red wines, sweet white wines, all topped by champagne. Afterward the guests watched a movie of "Swan Lake," drank more champagne, returned home to struggle with headaches and hangovers. It's reported that all Russians present were in a very cheerful mood!

We Turn to Butter- -and Ladies

TURNING from Communists to the homelier subject of margarine, Senators Fulbright and Millikin indulged in some gay repartee up on the Hill. If it's colored yellow there is a 10-cents-a-pound tax on margarine. Fulbright is for repealing the tax, claiming it's unreasonable since color is added to butter during many months of the year. Millikin's complicated rejoinder was that it's a different matter adding something to a product to make it look like something else, than to add something to a product to make it look like itself!

He explained further, tangling irretrievably in metaphor—a lady putting on a little lipstick to make herself more attractive is far different from someone who's not a lady using makeup!

The audience, obviously less old-fashioned about cosmetics, tittered, then roared with laughter when Arkansas' Fulbright, noted as a sterling family man, retorted: "Well, Senator, I'm afraid you've gotten me into a field in which I can't qualify as expert!"

Nothing New, Thank You

Man's Fancy in Spring Turns to Same Old Styles

By Peggy Preston

WELL, IT LOOKS as though we're in for a big disappointment, girls. Seems we're not going to be treated to a "bold look" in male fashions, after all.

The much-publicized "revolutionary change" in men's clothing which New York stylists have been tooting their horns about for the last few months, just isn't going to materialize here on the banks of the Potomac. A survey of men's clothing centers reveals that store shelves contain not one new surprise garment for the Easter parade.

PEGGY PRESTON

True, lapels will be a little wider . . . shoulder pads a bit smaller . . . coats fuller . . . colors more pronounced for casual wear. But not enough to make any noticeable difference.

Local custom tailors and stylists decry suggestions that their customers are going to wear drastically different clothes this year. Only item they will admit is new is a double-breasted sports jacket. And that, they claim, has been on the market for about two years. According to their version, it takes men that long to accept any small change in style.

But how about the "new" hat all the men have been talking about? The small one with the 2½-inch brim, supposed to be the most revolutionary form of headgear in a couple of decades?

"We've been carrying that type of hat for years," said the manager of one of Washington's swankiest shops. "And we expect to carry them for many years more."

All the experts were agreed on one point—You can't make a man change his type of hat. Invariably he will come into a shop, toss down his old one and state: "I want one exactly like this."

BUT THE LADIES, bless them, are going right ahead with their fashion shows.

Young career women will be interested in the show scheduled at Woodward & Lothrop's on Saturday at 11 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. Entitled "Glamour Magazine Career Girl Fashion Show," it will feature medium priced outfits, many of which are pictured in the March issue of the magazine.

Miss Joan Finley, Associate Merchandise Editor, will be commentator for the show and two girls who are members of the local Glamour Career Girl Council will model. They are Miss Gretchen Turner and Miss Kit Carlson, young businesswomen, who advise editors of Glamour Magazine on the clothing needs and preferences of Washington girls.

One part of the show will be devoted to cosmetics with Miss Helen Goudvis of New York explaining the new makeup colors and their relationship to this year's colors.

Pastel makeup shades are the principal beauty news of 1948. Pale pink lipstick and rouge and faintly tinted powder are recommended as best complementing the ultra feminine styles. Since we have been plastering ourselves with dark, suntanned shades the past few years, we all can use some instruction in how to apply these more fragile tones.

EVEN THE KIDDIES are getting into the act. Youngsters from Helen Cole's Kindergarten School will model in a fashion show of their own Saturday morning at 11:30 at the Hecht Co.'s store in Silver Spring.

The children, ranging in age from 5 to 7, will model in five scenes, showing what they will wear this spring for school, play and dress.

Among the little models will be Billy Smith, Jerry Walder, Roger Lenkin, Marilyn Margetts, Leslie Melman, Gary Melnicove, Carole Cole, Jane Beck, Bobby Understein, Mark Felstein, Richard Mills, and others.

By Arthur Ellis - The Washington Post

HERE IS A COSTUME COAT for late spring and summer, as easy to wear as a dress and a good pinch hitter for a suit. Made of pure silk shantung, it is made on simplified princess lines with high, fitted collar of a Mandarin coat. It comes in rich, Chinese inspired colors such as dragon red, china sea, rum blossom and gobi yellow and may be worn over dresses in contrasting shades of the same fabric. Coat and dress will be shown as an ensemble in the fashion show and tea Saturday at 2 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel given by the Women's Committee of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking. Fashions will be from Julius Garfinckel & Co.

How to Prevent Smothering Of Young Baby in His Crib

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

This column shies away from discussions which tend to frighten mothers. There are enough accidents everywhere to keep mothers on edge without making them too self-conscious about incidents which are relatively rare.

But Mrs. C. V. wants something said about babies smothering. She writes, "During the last few months there have been three babies smothered to death in our home town. We have always had a fear of this, though our baby is strong. We let him sleep on his stomach. Could this accident be caused by pinning blankets too tightly? I'd appreciate an answer in your column."

There might be innumerable reasons why a baby would smother. I'll enumerate some of the more probable ones. It could happen, as you said, if a baby got his head under blankets pinned too tightly and was unable to extricate himself. It could happen if his head were the pivot of a sleeping bag, tied tightly to the corners of the bed. In this case we would call it strangling rather than smothering. A tiny baby might get a number of heavy covers over its head (babies always throw up their hands and covers might come with them) and be unable to get out from under.

The tiny baby who is put on his stomach to sleep might get his nose buried in the mattress and be unable to lift his head easily. It's well to be sure the baby can lift his head without difficulty before he is put on his stomach to sleep.

When a baby has to sleep with an adult, there is real danger of suffocation, as the adult may turn over on the baby in sleep, cutting off its oxygen to a dangerous point. This is one very good reason for giving a baby its own sleeping bassinet or crib from birth.

Pillows are undesirable for the child under 5 years of age. It is possible for a small baby to bury his nose in their soft surface.

Babies have strangled when they have regurgitated milk while lying on their backs. It is safer to put the baby on its side or stomach after a meal. Any spit-up milk can run our harmlessly.

Hints on Caring For Your Pets

Don't force your dog on the person who is not fond of them, or even a little bit afraid of them. That person cannot help the feeling any more than you can the love you have for the animal. Restrain the dog when people of this sort are around.

If you feed the dog a half can of dog food each day, keep the second half of the food right in the can until the next day. It is an exploded theory that it will harm the food and it is so much easier to judge the amount if divided exactly in half right in the can.

Prolonging the Beauty of Cut Flowers

Cut flowers will last a long time if they are taken care of properly. A half inch should be cut off the stems each day, the stale water thrown out and fresh put in. Leaves should be stripped from the flowers if they are low enough to be below the water. The vase should be sufficiently large to allow the stems to breathe and take in the water. Any strings and wires should be removed before arranging the flowers. When the flowers begin to show signs of fading an aspirin tablet placed in that day's fresh water will frequently prolong their lives.

Ways of Lightening Wash Day Blues

Washing machines kept in a cold place, such as an outside porch, should be brought into a warm room several hours before using. Otherwise, the oil or grease in the machine may become stiff and the starting load may blow a fuse in the circuit.

On cold days it may be better to dry clothes indoors, as clothes which freeze stiff on lines suffer more wear and tear from whipping in the wind than soft clothes.

Rub your lines with vinegar before hanging up clothes. The fabric will be less likely to freeze to lines and stick.

New Ways to Serve Old Favorite, Peanut Butter

Peanut butter goes well with many foods—sweet, tart, spicy. With peanut butter on the plentiful list, now is a good time to try out combinations that may give a new taste to sandwiches packed for a lunch or served at home.

Following are some possibilities suggested by home economists of the United States Department of Agriculture:

PRUNE.—One-half cup peanut butter, ½ cup chopped cooked prunes, 2 teaspoons lemon juice, 2 teaspoons prune juice. Blend well.

DATE.—One-half cup peanut butter, ½ cup chopped pitted dates, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, ½ cup cooked salad dressing. Mix lightly.

PINEAPPLE.—One-half cup peanut butter, ½ cup drained crushed pineapple. Mix lightly.

APRICOT OR PEACH.—One-half cup peanut butter, 1/3 cup chopped cooked apricots or peaches (sweetened), 2 tablespoons cooked salad dressing. Mix lightly.

CRANBERRY SAUCE.—One-half cup peanut butter, ½ cup cranberry sauce. Mix lightly.

CARROT AND RAISIN.—One-half cup peanut butter, 1 cup shredded carrots, ¼ cup chopped seeded raisins, ¼ cup cooked salad dressing. Mix lightly.

VEGETABLE.—One-half cup peanut butter, ½ cup chopped celery leaves, ½ cup grated carrots, 2 tablespoons French dressing, ⅛ teaspoon salt. Mix well.

Bedtime Visitors Not Best for Baby

Don't permit visitors to come in at bedtime and play with baby, getting him laughing and excited. You will pay for it later when baby spends a restless, fretful night.

Give the schoolboy a clock in his room and see if this does not develop a sense of responsibility in the early morning rising. Usually one call in the morning will be all that is necessary when he can see the clock and realize how little time he has to waste.

Spring Styles Demand Slim Waists

By Ida Jean Kain

Haven't you heard? Spring is coming . . . it's three weeks away! In spring styles the waist is the center of attention, so find your waistline limit, then hew to that slender line.

There are several ways of figuring your proper waist size. Measurement charts allow 25 inches for 5 feet of height and one half inch at the waist for each extra inch of height. The average woman 5' 4" may have a 27-inch waistline . . . fair enough.

However, to include structural differences use a sliding rule . . . and allow 24 to 26 inches for the basic 5 feet, and one half inch difference for each extra inch. The slight girl has a sweet waist at 24 inches; the medium frame at 25 inches, and the stocky gal's waist is neat at 26 inches.

Standard Sizes

The accepted standard of the dress industry in misses' sizes goes like this: 25 inches for size 12, 26½ inches for size 14, 28 inches for size 16, 30 inches for size 18 . . . that's far enough.

Now you know your waistline limit . . . let's stay easily within it. Today's waist trimmers will do the trick—and in time for spring.

First, a two-way stretch . . .

Position: Lying on back on floor, legs stretching down, arms stretching up.

Movement: Pull up with the arms, push down with the feet . . . with a thoroughgoing both-ends-against-the-middle-measurement stretch. Relax . . . yawn . . . it's a nice releasing feeling, takes out all the kinks. Now s-t-r-e-t-c-h again, centering on the midsection. Relax and repeat a third time.

Favorite Exercise

Now my favorite (skip this if you have any lower back weakness):

Position: Lying on back on floor, knees flexed, feet on floor, arms out at sides shoulder level.

Movement: Keeping knees together, twist gently at waist and slowly lower thighs to floor at one side until one thigh is on floor . . . pull up snugly with girdle muscles through the exercise and try to keep your back on the floor as much as possible to put the action smack on waistline muscles. Twist gently but firmly back to position, then to the other side. Repeat about six times, later 12.

Streamliner

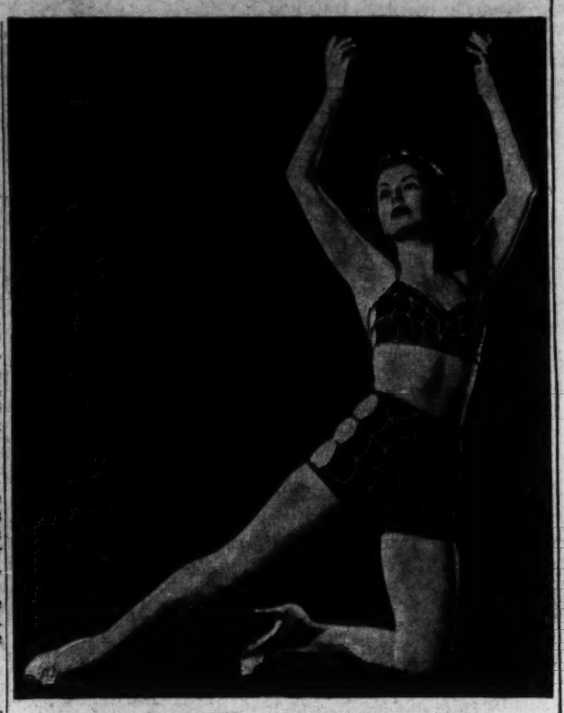
Movement: From this position bend sideward, easily . . . then bend to the other side . . . gracefully. Repeat six times, alternating sides. Increase the bend a bit more each day. Then let left hand drop down on floor for support, and stretching with the free hand, pull slim all along that side. Three times will do nicely. Stand on opposite knee and stretch along the other side.

Handles and Hinges

When painting a cupboard which has many handles and hinges of metal, coat the surface of the metal with vaseline before you start to paint. Then all spots of paint that may be splashed on them will come off with rubbing of a dry cloth.



Spring styles call for a slim waist . . . and exercise. Pat Alphin, screen lovely, illustrates a graceful exercise for a willowy waist, as described in today's column by Ida Jean Kain

Tips on Keeping Eggs Fresh

Eggs, now among the plentiful foods on the market, need to be kept both cold and covered in home kitchens if they are to keep fresh and in prime condition for eating, the United States Department of Agriculture advises.

Speed eggs to the refrigerator or other cold place and keep them there until they are used. Experiments have shown that at ordinary room temperature eggs lose as much freshness in three days as they do in the refrigerator in two weeks.

Keep eggs covered in the refrigerator for two reasons: (1) to keep them from losing moisture through the porous shell in the dry atmosphere of the refrigerator, and (2) to protect them from absorbing odors of "off flavors." Instead of keeping them in a cardboard carton or an open bowl in the refrigerator, as is usually done, put them in a covered dish or one of the closed containers used for vegetables.

Items that will be essential. I want to have everything ready. If we have a diaper laundry, are we supposed to buy diapers ahead of time or from the laundry when service starts? M. C.

The minimum essentials for a new baby are:

3 shirts with sleeves.

3 dozen diapers (if you do not use a diaper service).

Kimonos and (or) nightgowns.

A bunting or heavy blanket for outdoor use.

3 or 4 cotton receiving blankets.

Soft knitted towels and wash cloths.

Baby oil or powder.

A bed or bassiet.

Sheets and rubber pad for bed.

Quilted cotton pads or rubberized squares for use under baby.

Nursing bottles, nipples and caps.

Graduate for mixing formulae.

Some mothers keep the tiny baby (day and night) in outing kimonos which open down the front because of the ease in changing. Others put on knitted nightgowns at night and use the kimonos for daytime. The number you have will depend upon how you plan to use them and your washing facilities. Such garments as slips, dresses or rompers are needed as the baby gets older, but it's wise to defer the purchase of them, since they are favorite gifts.

Most diaper services provide all of the diapers without additional charge and a covered enamel receptacle in which to keep the soiled ones. If you plan to use a diaper service, I would suggest you make a reservation with them at least a month, if possible, in advance of the baby's arrival so that you can be certain service will start when needed.

What is the accepted length from the floor for a teen-ager's spring dresses? My daughter is 15. C. R. B.

This is a difficult question to answer, because the proper length of a dress from the floor is so dependent on the height of the individual. However, 13½ inches would be about right for street wear for a young girl of average height, according to the designers.

How can closets in an old house be treated for moths most effectively? R. T. H.

To control moths in a closet, brush thoroughly all clothing, clean the closet thoroughly and seal all cracks in the plaster and about baseboards with crack filler. Equip doorframes with rubber or felt gaskets against which the door can be shut tight at all points. Place on the top shelf or hang in muslin bags from hooks 1 pound of giant flake naphthlene or paradiachlorobenzene to each 100 cubic feet of closet space. The fumes given off by the slow evaporation of the crystals quickly stop moth larvae from feeding and ultimately kill them if fumes are retained long enough in proper concentration. It is therefore important that the concentration of the fumes be maintained by making sure that the closet is perfectly tight and has a tight-fitting door that is kept closed except for brief periods when clothing is being put in or taken out.

I have a rug which is grass or straw, made in Japan, almost an inch thick, reversible, and of prewar make. Could I clean it and refinish it myself? It looks like it has a clear varnish on it. Do you have any idea how much one like it might cost now? J. P. B.

Yes, you can refinish your rug yourself. Place several thicknesses of newspaper under the rug and go over it with the brush attachment of your vacuum sweeper to remove every trace of dust. After being clean in this manner, it can be varnished with high-grade clear varnish.

The rug department of a Washington department store carries rush block rugs made in Japan which are slightly under 1-inch thickness and sell for 30 to 35 cents a square foot.

We have just completed the addition of a pine-paneled recreation room to the basement of our home and would appreciate any suggestions that you could give us as to giving the pine walls a proper, not too light and not too dark, honey-colored finish. Friends tell us that because of high humidity of this area in the summer time, some sort of wood filler should be applied first in an effort to keep out any condensation that may form on the walls. If this is true, what should we use? M. B. S.

For a treatment which will slightly darken the pine, use a liberal wiping of half-and-half mixture of raw linseed oil and turpentine. Give the wood all it will soak up. After an hour or so, wipe the surface clean with an absorbent cloth. Repeat the treatment 24 hours later. This treatment does not interfere with the natural mellowing that comes with age. If you wish a darker tone, tint the linseed oil-turpentine mixture with color in oil. Experiment on an inconspicuous spot until you get the exact tone you wish. Before staining, remove any grease stains by sponging with benzine. Sand any stain which does not come off with benzine before oiling.

A filler added to the paneling would have no effect on condensation. To prevent condensation on basement walls, a lining such as furring strips an inch or so thick to provide an air space should have been placed between the masonry walls and the paneling. If treated in this way, the interior walls will not become as cold as the exterior walls and condensation will be avoided. Keeping the basement windows closed on damp days and using a fan on the floor to improve circulation will also do much to prevent condensation.

On the Town

WE'VE all heard almost every side of the brave new look at the Sheraton Cocktail Lounge, so let's look at the waitress' side . . . After screening almost 100 girls, the management selected eight to be trained and fitted with tailored uniforms. The uniforms are more like a peekaboo creation from Paris than anything else, and manage to show a very enticing amount of tender young lady . . . On opening night we managed to talk to Barbara Branch, whose picture adorns the column today . . . Barbara's reactions to the new garb were these: The old uniform looked and felt like "an old laundry sack," while the new ones made her feel like a lady receiving guests in her home instead of a waitress trying to make a living. Another favorable reaction is the tendency of the customer to be a little more courteous and to leave a larger tip for girls while being demanding.

Barbara, who is 23 and a native Washingtonian, has worked in several of the larger spots in town but feels very happy at the Sheraton.

The average customer in the lounge on opening night seemed very pleased with the whole thing although we did detect a startled look or two as people came in the door . . . As for us, we're all for the new trend, including the decorations . . .

Boris Karloff created a problem for Olmsted's restaurant just before he left town . . . Seems he dined there one day and a number of the patrons used the menus for autograph cards to carry home with them. . . . Dinner time came with hardly enough menus to go around.

Talia the dancer, who not too long ago was working at the Shoreham, and who, during the war, appeared at the Troika, has married a wealthy Chicago man and retired from the show world.

MAT WINDSOR found his talent search for a gal singer in his Windsor Room so successful that he's starting a contest to find a male crooner . . . It will run next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday . . . The winner will receive an engagment at the Windsor Room.

Barnee, the Shoreham Blue Room maestro, has a never-fail remedy for the hubby who comes in late . . . He suggests that the next morning, before wifey has a chance to wind-up, hubby find something drastically wrong with the breakfast . . . According to the rules and regulations, this should distract the better half while he thinks up half a dozen plausible excuses. (Ed. note: We assume no responsibility if this remedy fails.)

The Casino Royal opened its new show last night . . . Jack Schaefer and Patricia Lane are, of course, being held over . . . The rest of the show is filled out by the Mister and two Misses, a tap dancing trio, and Kay and Aldrich, novelty acrobatic team . . . They'll be here for two weeks.

Cafe Caprice is a good spot to drop into on your way uptown after a concert at the hall if you're still in the music mood . . . Stephan Iles at that spot has a very nice way of slipping from classical to popular and back again.

Montgomery County Schools Sight Relief From Crowding

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Partial relief for overcrowded Montgomery County schools was promised yesterday with the disclosure that additions on existing schools will add 74 new classrooms by this fall.

On the basis of 35 pupils per room, the figure used by County school officials, the new facilities will take care of an additional 2590 pupils.

In a report on the county's vast school building program currently under way, officials explained enrollment is at a record high of 18,500 pupils. They estimated by the next school year there could be a maximum of 23,500.

A total of $6,200,000 in bond issues already approved is financing the building program. Considerable expansion also is planned for next year.

In the county board of education's report were shown the following classroom additions "now available or will be in the immediate future:"

Montgomery Hills Junior High, four classrooms, an art room, a library, and a home arts unit as well as an office and health room, $230,951; Pine Crest Elementary, two classrooms and an activity room, $85,436; Pleasant View Elementary, four classrooms, $100,177; Gaithersburg Elementary, four classrooms, $61,003.

Woodlin Elementary, five classrooms, an activity room, an office and health room, $141,821; Lynnbrook Elementary, four classrooms, and an activity room, $138,380.

Scheduled for completion by September are the following:

Rockville Elementary, one classroom, $17,660; North Four Corners Elementary, one classroom and a library, $29,921; Montgomery County Junior College, a temporary building, $25,000; Potomac Elementary, four classrooms and an activity room, $85,825; Westbrook Elementary, six classrooms and a cafeteria, $250,550.

Glenmont Elementary, three classrooms and a library, a teachers' room and reconditioning of a future classroom, $118,660; Kensington Elementary, seven classrooms, an office and a teachers' room, $190,920; Gaithersburg High, shower and locker room facilities, $50,940; Lincoln High, a temporary gymnasium, $101,530;

Flower Avenue Elementary, nine classrooms, an activity room, an office, a teachers' room and kitchen, $222,500; Montrose Elementary, one classroom, central heating and inside toilet facilities, $21,840.

Colesville Elementary, one classroom, a kitchen and washroom facilities, as well as general improvements, $47,000; Bradley Elementary, two classrooms, $44,900; Alta Vista Elementary, two classrooms, $49,000.

Parkside Elementary, three classrooms and a health room, $85,000; Woodlin Elementary, one classroom, $17,700; Sherwood Elementary, four classrooms, $85,000; Rockville Elementary, two classrooms, $37,100, and Pleasant View Elementary, four classrooms, an office, a teachers' room and kitchen, $116,600.

Way of Scalding

There's a reason for scalding milk before using it in a yeast dough. The scalding stops the enzyme action which might otherwise cause some softening of the dough. The simple step of scalding the milk makes the dough easier to handle and improves the texture of the breads made from it.

have swelled the chorus of consternated sympathy for which she was bidding, and thus left without giving her any help at all—as of course the hand-wringing bystanders didn't.

Girl's History Is Against Her

FROM the viewpoint of mental hygiene, Jane is a very sick person, obviously; sick all the time, sick in her soul, sick with "lost child" fear at every turn,— the net result of total insecurity in family relationship from the time she was born, no doubt, to judge from your references to her wayward parents (which I have deleted).

Her erratic behavior is a demoralized attempt to deal with life as best she can; to get by somehow; to evade situations or realities that are just too much for her, because she wasn't prepared (by example, training and devotional nurture) to meet them adequately.

Jane needs deep psychological help on a long-term basis, to give her a fighting chance to get well and achieve normalcy. And lacking that help, she may drift eventually into institutional custody. Thus as a victim of her background, and indeed of the sorry social system entire, she is a candidate for compassion on a grand scale; but even so, your verbal poke the other night was right for the occasion.

Measuring Flour

Most yeast dough recipes call for "about" so many cups of flour, rather than mentioning the exact amount. This is done because different flours absorb less liquid than others. Hard wheat flour, for example, usually requires more liquid than does soft wheat flour. Homemakers learn to add just the right amount of flour by a little experience in handling yeast doughs and batters.

Fluffy Fringe

Fringed napkins will look much better if they are slapped against the ironing board and the fringe loosened and made fluffy before they are pressed with an iron.

Without Painful Backache
Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

The Gallup Poll

Public Knows 4 Best Among Candidates

Truman, Dewey, MacArthur and Walker Most Often Recognized by the Electorate

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 4.—A candidate photo identification quiz conducted among the Nation's voters shows the faces of President Truman, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Henry A. Wallace are by far the best known of the men widely talked about as presidential candidates this year.

When voters were shown photographs of Senator Robert A. Taft, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg and Harold E. Stassen, fewer than two in every five were able to identify them correctly at the time the poll was taken in the second week of February.

Approximately 1 in 10 could identify photographs of Gov. Earl Warren of California and Joseph E. Martin of Massachusetts, Speaker of the United States House of Representatives.

Each interviewer was supplied with reproductions of close-up, full-face photographs of the various men, each photograph measuring approximately 2½ to 3 inches in size. (The actual photographs used are reproduced in reduced size in an adjoining column.) These pictures were handed to each voter interviewed in the poll and the following question was asked:

Here are some photographs of important men. Will you please look at the photographs and tell me their names?

The results of this survey, believed to be the first all-inclusive candidate photo identification test ever conducted in American political history, follow:

	P.C. able to identify correctly	Incorrect	Don't know
Harry S. Truman	93%	—	7
Thomas E. Dewey	34	—	16
Dwight D. Eisenhower	83	1	16
Douglas MacArthur	76	3	21
Henry A. Wallace	62	1	37
Robert A. Taft	40	1	59
James A. Farley	31	1	68
Arthur H. Vandenberg	27	4	69
Harold E. Stassen	26	16	58
Earl Warren	12	2	86
Joseph E. Martin	11	1	88
Claude E. Pepper	5	2	93

A photograph of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt was also included in the test, for purposes of comparison in studying the results. A total of 95 per cent were able to identify his picture.

Although Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower removed himself as a candidate, his photograph was kept in the survey also to form a basis of comparison.

The survey results have no particular significance politically, except to show how comparatively few men prominent in political life are well known to the voters. The same thing has been found in other earlier surveys by the institute in which voters have been asked to identify names alone, without photographs to aid them in making the identification. It was found that while more than 6 voters out of every 10 could identify the name of Wallace, George C. Marshall, Taft, Dewey, Truman, etc., fewer than half could identify such names as Earl Warren, Harry Byrd, and Harold Stassen.

An interesting sidelight of today's survey is the frequency with which people tend to confuse Stassen's picture with that of General Eisenhower. A total of 16 per cent of the sample identified Stassen incorrectly, and approximately 80 per cent of these people confused him with the general.

Hollywood producers will be interested to know that if they ever wish to depict Henry Wallace in screen dramas, Ray Milland ought probably to be picked to play his part. Quite a few voters in the poll called out Milland's name when shown the picture of Wallace.

Senator Taft was mistaken for Calvin Coolidge, while some voters identified House Speaker Martin as Wendell Willkie.

Pupils Adopt Belgian Son Of Ill Patriot

Pupils of the Ludlow-Taylor Elementary School, 6th and G sts. ne., have adopted an 11-year-old Belgian boy.

The boy Romanue Bunganeers, lives with his parents and their four other children in the town of Geetstrets, Belgium. His father, who joined the Belgian underground in 1942 for sabotage work, is in poor health as a result of deprivations suffered while hiding from the enemy and cannot provide proper care for his family.

The school children will contribute $15 a month toward Romanue's upkeep. Their principal, Miss Elizabeth Ramey, occupies the position of foster parents of Romanue, who was located by the Foster Parents' Plan for War Children, Inc., in New York.

Blond, brown-eyed Romanue wants to be a mechanic when he grows up. He has already gained in strength and weight and lost much of the nervousness he once had since he has been taken under the care of the Foster Parents' Plan.

Horan Voices Strong Interest In Post Poll on Sales Tax

Representative Walt Horan (R., Wash.) yesterday voiced strong interest in showings of The Washington Post Poll that opposition of District residents to a general 2 per cent sales tax had dropped from 69 per cent in September, 1946, to 53 per cent now.

Horan is chairman of the House District Appropriations subcommittee that is in charge of handling the city budget bill. He is also a leading House advocate of a 2 per cent general sales tax to raise new District revenue.

Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.), whose House District Fiscal Affairs subcommittee handles District money-raising measures, also expressed interest in the poll results, but emphasized the fact that it shows "the people themselves are opposed to a sales tax."

Bates said hearings on the request of the District Commissioners for enactment of a 2 per cent general retail sales tax will begin later this month. He and Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), chairman of the Senate District Fiscal Affairs subcommittee, are seeking to arrange a date for joint hearings on the revenue question.

Bates said the sales tax and all other sources of revenue would be considered in the hearings. He recalled that he had been a consistent opponent of the sales tax for the 25 years he had been active in municipal affairs. He said he still regarded it as the least desirable of any form of taxation and one that should be adopted only as a last resort.

Horan said he wanted to compliment The Washington Post for keeping the sales-tax issue before the public, and he declared that levy "is still the answer to the District's revenue problems."

"I am disturbed by the fact that with the budget hearings not too far off we still don't have a sound basis of revenue," Horan added.

Horan declared the two items of District business that should come first were passage of the home-rule bill and enactment of a new District revenue bill. He said he would like to see early action on both "so we will know where we stand before we write up the budget."

Government Job Can Be Exciting

By Richard L. Coe

THERE IS MORE FACT than fiction in the Warner's "T-Men," and the result is a cracking good adventure yarn.

With the technical advice of Elmer L. Irey, former boss of the T-Men, the picture sets forth a hypothetical case of how Treasury Department agents go about their jobs.

Though they haven't had much spotlight as entertainment matter, they're exciting chaps who get their direction from the old building on Pennsylvania ave. An Eagle-Lion, an infant among the producing groups, has made their jobs seem more exciting than the didoes in Private Eye films that often are produced at four times the cost of this $600,000 investment.

John C. Higgins has constructed his screen play from several actual case histories, Elmer Irey explains in his brief foreword. They add up to how a counterfeiting ring is smashed through an enormous amount of painstaking work by the Treasury.

When a fake bill makes its appearance, where do the authorities begin? It's a big country, you know; plant and masterminds can be scattered all over the place.

First, the investigating division assembles what data it can. Then it calls in a couple of agents (who are, by the way, always on a volunteer basis), and from that point on it's up to them. With the lead pointing toward Detroit, this means T-Men Dennis O'Keefe and Alfred Ryder have to pass themselves off as underworld veterans. How do you do this? You bone up, via old newspapers, on every crime that's occurred in the city in the past 20 years. Then the fun begins.

To the Inner Circle

You pass muster with the outer circle of thugs and glean that more's to be learned in Los Angeles. You're faced with passing muster all over again in a new underworld set. You learn that the success of this particular group lies in its superior paper. You palm off, or try to, a captured counterfeit plate, hoping all the while that no one catches wise too soon to the fact that you're a T-Man.

For everyone is suspicious of everyone else in crime circles and "T-Men" depicts this aspect of the underworld to sock effect. For a time you think a woman might be the boss. And much of the time you watch the crackup of a once top-flight boss, a detailed characterization of defeat skillfully acted by Wallace Ford.

There's no point in going fully into the plot lines of "T-Men." Each piece is relevant to the others. Realistic settings aid the semidocumentary quality of the film and the cast is thoroughly lifelike.

Juciest of the roles is O'Keefe's, and he does it with slam-bang authority that has welcome touches of humor. He also gets kicked around more than any recent film hero. Alfred Ryder, of the stage, is effective as his pal, who is killed when the ring realizes that he's a Treasury agent.

Seen at the time of year you're most conscious of your taxes, there's food for thought in the intricate battle against crime. Criminals can be expensive luxury to a national economy. So when you're making out those returns, give a thought to the packet of money it must take to track down only one lawless tribe.

GLAMOR EN MASSE is promised for Tuesday night's concert at Constitution Hall to benefit American Friends for Italian Aid . . . Rise Stevens will be decked out for her arias in one of those things that cause movie matrons to foam at the gills, and on tap, too, will be such upper case stars of song as Licia Albanese, Stella Roman, Kurt Baum, radio's Robert Merrill and Salvatore Baccaloni, the basso with a comic genius . . . Seats for this flossy event, biggest all-star songfest of the winter, are at the Snow bureau.

RACHEL CROTHERS, that leading playwright who hasn't been represented much lately, comes to the fore with the Masquers of Roosevelt Center production of "He and She" . . . This portrays Miss Crothers' thoughts on careers for husbands and wives . . . The Masquers will offer their latest Tuesday evening at 8:30 at Roosevelt High, sponsored by the D. C. Recreation Department.

TODAY'S the finale for "I Know Where I'm Going" at the Hippodrome . . . This Wendy Hiller-Pamela Brown-Roger Livesey comedy will be completing its tenth week tonight . . . Tomorrow Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh take over for a revival of "That Hamilton Woman."

SATURDAY MORNING at Keith's the Hecht Co. will be putting on a show for the kiddies, Walt Disney's "Song of the South," with Brer Rabbit in person, accompanied by the Metropolitan Police Boys Club Band . . . The orchestra floor tickets have gone out to children's institutions; balcony seats are for free to youngsters under 12 . . . First come, first served . . . Doors open 8:45 Saturday morning.

"T-MEN." Eagle-Lion release produced by Aubrey Schenck. Screen play by John C. Higgins suggested by a story by Virginia Kellogg from the files of the Treasury Department. Photographed by John Alton. Directed by Anthony Mann. At the Warner.

Berry and Conville Divide Laurels at Capital

By Orval Hopkins

WELL, man and boy, I've stared at Wallace Beery on the screen for 25 years, give or take a fortn't, and it is my considered judgment that he is just as good (pause) as he ever was. Beery, to put it another way, has done it again.

In "Alias a Gentleman," at the Capitol, Beery plays a former convict who stumbles into $250,000 and decides to go straight (some people will do anything for money). He is anxious to find his daughter, who has been missing for some years, and soon encounters a young actress who has been put up to posing as the missing girl by a passel of nasty schemers trying to get Wally's dough.

There is also a young former convict whom Beery will never allow to marry any daughter of his, and things trundle along to a conclusion you could have anticipated if you had stayed home in bed.

The Gags

The humor went something like this: Daughter: When you were in South America, did you ride the pampas? Beery: 'Course I did, but give me a horse every time. Daughter: And did you see any gauchos? Beery: Sure. I shot lots of 'em. They make mighty good eating, too.

The people around me enjoyed it tremendously.

"ALIAS A GENTLEMAN." MGM release produced by Nat Perrin. Screen play by William R. Lipman. Photographed by Ray June. Directed by Harry Beaumont. At the Capitol.

THE CAST

Jim Breeden	Wallace Beery
Johnny Lorgen	Tom Drake
Nora Breeden	Dorothy Patrick
Madge Parkson	Gladys George
Matt Exley	Leon Ames
Charlie Logan	Warner Anderson
No End	John Qualen
Harry Thomes	Sheldon Leonard
Jig Johnson	Travis Hardeitz
Zu	Jeff Corey

Tom Drake plays the young former convict who seeks the hand of the girl, played by Dorothy Patrick. Drake is a good-looking chap with a nice manner, but somebody is turning him into a very poor actor. John Qualen portrays an excellently named party called "No End." Qualen has departed completely from the make-up and histrionics he has used for years, but hasn't altered his voice one whit. "The voice is familiar," uneasy thought keeps whispering, "but who is this before me?"

Young Pianist Featured

Earle Donoho, young Bethesda pianist, plays Addinsell's "Warsaw Concerto" to open the live portion of the show at the Capitol. Earle seemed to me to have the concerto right where he wanted it, even if he did treat it a little rough, and he got a fine assist from Sam Jack Kaufman. "Nice bowing, Earle," cracked Sam.

Frank Conville has a single comedy act which goes into a double and is most entertaining. Good, easy comedy. It wears a little thin in a couple of places, but for the most part is very amusing. Bruna and Jolanda are two girls who perform some impossible muscular feats. Couldn't believe my eyes.

Jane Kean is a very pretty singer with the inevitable imitations, one of which, her Mae West number, is very good. The rest don't quite make it. Saul Grauman winds up the show with three lovely girls in something called "Stairway to Melody." This is the most incredible batch of nonsense I have ever witnessed.

FDR Wanted Job for Life, Garner Said

Franklin D. Roosevelt "would have run (for President) as long as he lived" former Vice President John N. Garner was revealed yesterday to have said at Mr. Roosevelt's death in 1945.

The Texan is quoted by Bascom N. Timmons in the issue of Collier's weekly, out today, as observing:

"Roosevelt would have run as long as he lived and was in office. He was ambitious. He wanted history to record him as the man who served longest in the Presidency. He was afraid someone would undo his work."

Yet, said Garner, he believed Mr. Roosevelt had injured his record and weakened his place in history by upsetting tradition to seek and win third and fourth terms. At another time Garner told Timmons no sort of strategy could have stopped the drive for a third nomination, but he would have attempted it anyway as a matter of principle.

The first New Deal Vice President said Mr. Roosevelt "made a good President" in his first four years and "could have been a great one" in his second term. He needed, declared Garner "a Joe Cannon as Speaker. That would have been a check on him."

(Joseph Gurney Cannon of Illinois was Speaker of the House from 1903 to 1911.—Editor's Note.)

Not only did Garner oppose third and fourth terms on principle, but he was not convinced Mr. Roosevelt "possessed traits which would make him the best war leader" if the United States were drawn into the war. It was as an experienced leader in time of crisis that Mr. Roosevelt was nominated and elected in 1940.

On the contrary, Timmons writes, Garner felt that the President's "desire to do everything" in both military and civilian fields might prove a real handicap.

Intensely bitter over the decision to seek a third term, Garner, did not feel Mr. Roosevelt was the only man in the Democratic Party of presidential capacity. He felt that the President "had persuaded himself" that he alone was capable of filling the office and that he deliberately withheld a definite "no" on the question in order to make it impossible for any other Democrat to build pre-convention strength.

The third term movement, he declared, was fostered by "job-holders to whom Roosevelt is a meal ticket." It was opposed, he added, by many prominent Democrats who could do nothing in effective opposition because:

"If they come out for anyone else, even though Roosevelt is not an announced candidate, they are classed as anti-Roosevelt and against the head of the party. Until he announces his plans all . . . choice among other candidates is subdued."

Timmons describes Garner's own entry into every State primary which was open and his hopeless bid for nomination at the Chicago convention. Upon his return to Washington, he packed his belongings and prepared to return home to Uvalde, Tex., as soon as his term as Vice President ended. He left Washington and public life then to hold open house for his friends on his ranch.

In an estimate of the Presidents he knew as a member of the House, Garner considers Herbert Hoover "in many ways . . . superbly equipped for the Presidency" and says he would have ranked with the "great" chief executives had he taken office in 1921 or 1937.

Parking Lot Operator Qualifies as Snow Removal Expert

On learning that the weatherman predicted snow for Wednesday night, the operator of one of our downtown parking lots moaned:

"Why can't it snow in the daytime instead of at night? Everything happens to me."

Pressed for an explanation of his strange preference, the parking lot man huffed:

"But it's so simple. If it snows during the night, I have to hire a crew to shovel the stuff off in the morning.

"But if it snows during the day, it snows on the parked cars and my customers carry the snow off with them when they drive out that night."

MORE ABOUT COURTESY

Mrs. Mildred Mitchel of 3986 Pennsylvania ave. se. writes:

"It might be a good idea to begin our courtesy campaign with Capital Transit's operators.

"They are absolutely the rudest people in Washington. They'd do well to take lessons from the W. M. and A. drivers, who are the epitome of courtesy.

"I've been traveling by Capital Transit for eight years as compared to only three months with W. M. and A., but there is absolutely no comparison in the courtesy and service."

Perhaps other District Liners will feel that the ratings of the two lines should be reversed, or that Capital Transit's operators are as courteous as could be expected. In most situations of this kind, there's a healthy division of opinion.

But there's also a moral to be learned from these complaints. We should say to ourselves:

"If I were a perfect stranger, meeting me for the first time, what would I think of me?"

Anybody who tries to pass that test conducts his own personal courtesy campaign all year around.

WE'RE SORRY, LADIES

In the March 1 issue of The Washington Post we ran a long list of Leap Year babies born on February 29.

The record of each child's birth was duly accompanied by the names of its father and mother—with two exceptions.

John Manahan of 5807 Taylor rd., Riverdale, Md., and James Arbuthnot of 5530 Volta ave., Hyattsville, Md., were listed without any reference to their wives.

Bill Drach of 2046 N. Vermont st., Arlington, Va., wonders whether we merely forgot to list the "and Mrs." or whether these gentlemen are truly responsible for two of the greatest news stories of all time.

I took Bill's question to our City Editor, who replied without a flicker of a smile:

"I suspect that two 'Mr. and Mrs.' prefixes somehow got lost in the shuffle, and that we have unintentionally slighted two mothers.

"The Washington Post stands ready to confess its error and admit that the fathers had some help."

"INTO EACH LIFE . . ."

Marshall Andrews doesn't recall who first penned these lines, but he thinks they're very appropriate these days:

The rain it raineth every day
Upon the just and unjust fella.
But chiefly on the just, they say;
The unjust steals the just's umbrella.

FEDERAL DIARY NOTE

Government workers who want a free booklet explaining the new Civil Service Retirement Act are sending their requests to Jerry Kluttz.

Each day the mailman staggers in with new bundles of letters and postcards, and dumps them atop the pile already on Jerry's desk. As this is written the total has passed the 15,000 mark.

Yesterday I found Kluttz laboriously searching through the mountains of mail, and asked what was up.

"I'm expecting a letter from home," Jerry explained, "and I'm afraid it'll get lost in this stuff. Instead of getting an answer from their Jerry, my folks would wind up two months from now with a booklet explaining the Retirement Act."

Bob Morrow of 1755 P st. nw, is a bit skeptical about the Shoreham Blue Room ad in Monday's edition of our morning contemporary. The advertisement read: "Dinner $2.50 (including cover). Steak dinner $275."

If steak is really that high, a fellow could save money by limiting himself to $100 Jefferson-Jackson Day dinners.

THIS MODERN AGE

One of my puns has backfired on me. I didn't dream that I'd have to explain this one.

The other day we had an item about a native of Albemarle County who wanted to borrow a neighbor's corkscrew. The caption was "Kith and Kinsey."

I thought that was right cute. He was asking his kith and kin for a corkscrew because he wanted to open his bottle of Kinsey.

In my day, Kinsey used to be a brand of whisky. I thought the name would be recognized as such. But I failed to reckon with this new generation.

Many readers have asked what Kinsey had to do with the story because the only Kinsey they know about is Alfred C., who wrote the current best-seller, "Sexual Behavior in the Human Male."

HOLLYWOOD. — In Butch Jenkins' last picture the youngster suddenly became speechless at the beginning of one scene and long hours had to be devoted to him before he would respond. Norman Taurog, who just finished directing Butch's newest movie, "The Bride Goes Wild," is a specialist in directing children. Before each day's shooting began Taurog gave the boy some bubble-gum, a ball or a toy . . . One afternoon Butch became speechless and couldn't deliver his lines. Taurog took him aside, patted him and asked: "What's on your mind, Butch?" . . . The boy finally confided: "I was just wonderin' if I could throw a ball as high as the ceiling on stage 26" . . . Taurog called a halt in the film-shooting, sent for a ball, gave it to Butch and sent him to stage 26 . . . Butch returned, said, "Couldn't do it," and then read his lines perfectly.

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

Keefe Fights for Tooth-Saver

By Drew Pearson

Congressman Frank Keefe of Wisconsin won fame a couple of years ago when he scowled from under shaggy eyebrows at Pearl Harbor witnesses and fired searching questions regarding the real guilt for our greatest naval disaster.

Keefe

Those who heard Congressman Keefe browbeat admirals never would have dreamed that he could be equally demanding when it came to a humane subject like public health, but ever since the tides of political fate put Keefe in charge of the subcommittee which votes funds for hospitals, universities and medical research, he has become a crusader for better health.

Believe it or not, while other GOP Congressmen were pinching pennies, Keefe actually scolded United States Public Health officials for asking insufficient money to publicize a miraculous new means of preserving children's teeth.

At a cost of 80 cents per child, Congressman Keefe discovered, children's teeth can be treated with sodium fluoride, thereby preventing dental decay in about 50 per cent of the cases.

Public Health officials testifying before Keefe's committee told him that sodium fluoride could be mixed in a solution and painted on children's teeth four times in their lives between the ages of 3 and 13—after which most of them could virtually forget about going to the dentist.

Shortage of Dentists

The Congressman was flabbergasted. He wanted to know why the treatment had not been given to the public.

"The number of dentists is too few," replied United States Public Health Director Dr. Thomas Parran, "and they are so busy dealing with emergency conditions, especially among adults, that they just do not have the time. We do not have the dental manpower to do this job for the whole child population."

"A dentist's assistant would be able to apply this sodium fluoride to the child's teeth," observed Congressman Keefe.

"Yes," replied Dr. Parran, "but we are terribly short even in the number of dental assistants."

"It looks to me," said Keefe, "as though an advertising program would disseminate this information to the people of the country until there would be an overwhelming demand upon the public-health services to make this available to the children.

"You have only a small outfit here in Washington," Keefe continued, referring to the central Public Health Service, "only eight people are asked for under this appropriation."

Dr. Parran explained that he was trying to use a nucleus of dental hygienists who, in turn, would train others, but the Congressman from Wisconsin wasn't satisfied.

"You are asking here for $1,500,000—a very small amount for administrative expenses," he observed, referring to the entire public-health appropriation. Keefe then asked how much of this would be used for dental education.

Treatment Is Simple

The Public Health officials were not able to give a definite answer, but they did explain how simple the sodium fluoride treatment was.

"Our schedule requires application four times during a child's life—at the ages of 3, 7, 10 and 13 years," explained Dr. J. W. Mountin. "The whole thing does not take more than a minute except the cleaning of the teeth, and many of the teeth need not be cleaned."

"What does the sodium fluoride solution cost?" asked Keefe. "Is it very expensive?"

"A gallon of solution can be made for a cost of approximately 5 cents."

"A gallon of it would take care of pretty nearly the whole school population of a normal-sized community, would it not?" asked the Congressman.

"Yes, indeed."

Keefe went on to point out that if the new revolutionary dental program were left merely to dentists, its progress would be much too slow. Therefore he urged that a Nation-wide educational program be undertaken. Public Health officials said they would consider the matter.

Health Merry-Go-Round

Things you didn't know about the health of your country: The United States now has the lowest death rate in history. In 1946 only 10 people died out of every 1000. The baby death rate is also the lowest in our history—35.1 per 1000 . . . Highest birth mortality in the United States is in New Mexico, where 81.2 babies die for every 1000 among the Spanish population. If you're born in Arkansas you have the best chance of living. Its infant mortality is the lowest—26.4 per 1000 . . . Fifty years ago TB caused the second largest number of deaths in the United States. Today it's only the seventh deadliest disease. Heart disease remains the chief killer of the American people. Virus diseases are getting worse, though the medics think they've isolated at least one virus which causes the common cold . . . Polio is on the increase and its cause still remains a mystery . . . Typhus is also increasing . . . General Eisenhower's perfect teeth are attributed to the sodium fluoride in the water where he once lived in Texas.

Some areas in the Dakotas and the Southwest have too much fluoride in the water which makes teeth enamel mottled . . . The Public Health Service is experimenting with means of putting the right amount of sodium fluoride in city water supplies, in order to preserve teeth. They believe this can be done in areas which have a central water supply . . . More and more city water supplies are becoming polluted and dangerous. About 100 million people (United States population is only 140 million) live in communities which need eight billion dollars spent to improve their water supply and sewage disposal.

Gallinger Critics Given Rebuke by Dr. Ruhland

He Asks Medical Society of D. C. To Probe Hospital Needs, Services

Health Officer George C. Ruhland yesterday rebuked recent critics of Gallinger Hospital for their "entirely destructive" attacks and asked the District Medical Society to investigate the institution.

Dr. Ruhland suggested, in a letter to Medical Society President Raymond T. Molden, that a committee be named to probe needs of the institution, quality of service, costs of operation and management of the hospital.

"The unfortunate publicity which for quite some time now has again centered on Gallinger Hospital naturally has had a very disturbing effect on the patients, employes and the public in general," Dr. Ruhland asserted.

He singled out "recent publicity" that he attributed to Dr. C. F. Geschickter, pathologist of Georgetown; Dr. Robert J. Coffey, head of the Georgetown surgical staff, and Dr. Brian Blades, chief of the surgical staff at George Washington University, as "illustrative of the type of criticism which is not constructive."

Dr. Ruhland suggested that the proposed investigation cover the following points:

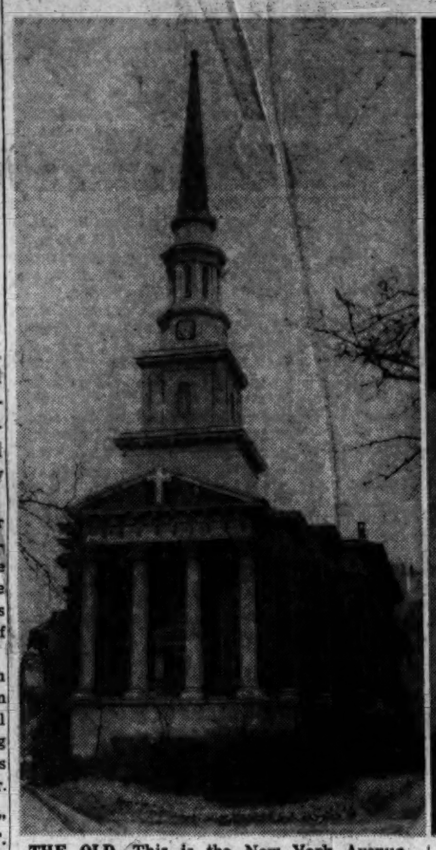
1. The needs of the institution as a physical plant, including an investigation of the record of the responsible officers, whether they are aware of these needs and have presented them to proper Governmental agencies.

2. The quality of service. Is the quality of service inferior to that of other hospitals in this community?

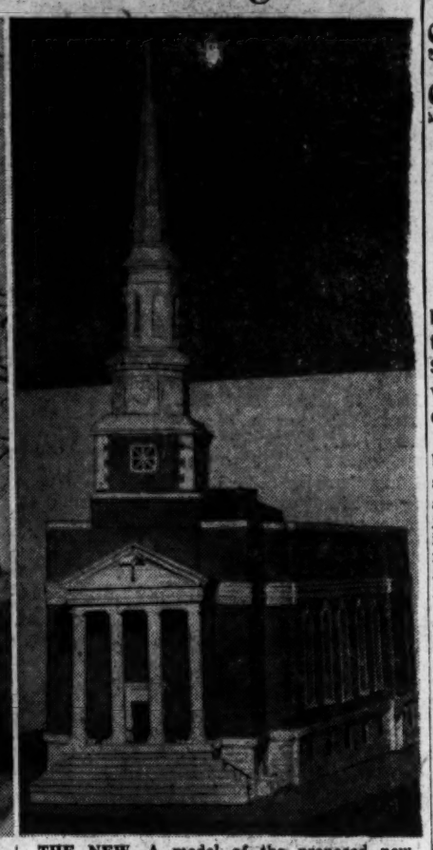
3. The cost of operating the hospital. This should be also on a comparative basis, preferably with institutions responsible for similar service.

4. Is the set-up of divided authority in the management of the institution desirable and, if not, how can it best be resolved?

New York Ave. Church Gives Building Plans



THE OLD—This is the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, one of Washington's historic landmarks, which will be torn down to make way for a new building



THE NEW—A model of the proposed new church shows that it will look much like the old, even with the addition of one story. Plans closely follow present edifice

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

The proposed new edifice for New York Avenue Presbyterian Church will closely follow the style of the present building, it was learned yesterday.

The essential changes will include an additional story; an auditorium seating 1800 persons, 500 more than the present capacity, and space for several hundred more in Sunday school.

James Sherier, former clerk of the session of the church, pointed out that there is "about $200,000" in the present building fund, and that the completion of a new structure will depend on the outcome of an $800,000 campaign. The present fund was the result of a drive started in 1945 to enlarge the sanctuary and Lincoln chapel. That project was dropped in favor of a complete new building plan.

The present building, the cornerstone of which was laid in October, 1859, is distinguished by its graceful tower, its Corinthian portico and other characteristics of the classic revival. The church, which stands at 13th and New York ave. nw., was ready for use in 1860.

One of the first worshipers in the new church was Abraham Lincoln. He was among the seven Presidents who attended services either there or in the congregation's previous locations on the present site of the Willard Hotel.

In 1903, the centennial of the church's organization, the Robert Todd Lincoln family presented a set of chimes cast in the foundry once operated by the family of Nancy Hanks, Lincoln's mother. The chimes are now in the Lincoln Tower. Lincoln's pew, which he rented for $50 annually, is on the center aisle in the eighth row.

When the church stood at 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., President Franklin Pierce was among its worshipers. He once entertained his Sunday School class at the White House. Other Presidents who worshiped with the congregation were Harrison, Buchanan, Fillmore and Buchanan.

The congregation, first called the Associated Reformed Church, originated with a group of Scotch-Irish dissenters. In 1860 it united with the Second Presbyterian Church. Dr. Peter Marshall has served as pastor since 1937. He is also Senate chaplain.

Safe, Liquor $1800 Cash Stolen Here

Amputee Veteran And His Companion Are Victims of Robbery, Beating

An armed bandit, housebreakers and a sticky-fingered thief stole a safe, more than $1800 in cash and 100 fifths of whisky in Washington yesterday.

As the new crimes went on the books, police announced possible solution of at least 20 burglaries and vandalisms with arrest of a juvenile gang in Southeast Washington. The four youths held, ranging in age from 13 to 18, have admitted most of the housebreakings, police said.

In nearby Maryland, Prince Georges County police sought two men for the robbery beatings of two men, one of them a war veteran amputee.

Former Employe Accused

George Manos, owner of the Harlem Grill, 3308 Georgia ave. nw., gave up $82 to an armed man he said was a former employe. Police sought a Negro, five feet, eight inches tall, wearing a brown overcoat and brown felt hat.

A neatly dressed man walked out of Oscar Gildenhorn's Comet Liquor Store, 1845 Columbia rd. nw., with almost $1000 in cash which the owner left on a cash registered while he waited on a customer yesterday morning. Gildenhorn said the man was a Negro, five feet, five inches tall, wearing a camel's hair coat and neatly trimmed mustache.

A 22-inch square safe containing $150, $30 from a cash register and 100 fifths of whisky were taken from the Metropole Cafe, 1018 14th st. nw., the owner, Frank G. Toth, reported to police.

Burglars Get $603

Another victim was James Cousen, owner of the Capitol Wine & Liquor Store, 229 Pennsylvania ave. se., who reported loss of $603 to burglars.

Thieves who scrambled through a laundry chute after entering an unlocked door removed a cash register valued at $250, and $150 in cash from the Custis Beauty Salon, 1805 H st. nw., Gus Buttinelli, owner, told police.

Miss Dixie Duke, manager of the Urban Land Institute, 1737 K st. nw., reported the theft of $130 in bills.

Boys Seen on Roof

The Washington juvenile gang, headed by Paul M. McMillan, 18, of 5017 D st. se., who is in jail charged with housebreaking, was rounded up through help of two citizens.

Bruce Stewart of 48 53d pl. se. and Louis Davis of 24 53d st. se. reported the boys on the roof of a house at 5315 E. Capitol st. Pvts. T. J. Thomas and G. E. Murray and Precinct Detective R. H. Wolfe made the arrests. They said loot in the burglaries amounted to about $600.

Victims in the Maryland robbery-beatings were John Andrews, 50-year-old repair superintendent at Bolling Field, and Ernest F. Cage, 30, of 4566 Blue Plains dr. sw., a one-legged veteran.

Two men followed Cage and Andrews out of a Southeast tavern, they told police, and asked Cage for a ride. The strangers pulled guns from their pockets a short time later, Cage said, and told him to drive around.

Tossed From Car

They robbed Andrews of about $8, tossed him out of the car, beat him unconscious and then told Cage to drive on down the road. They then took $44 from him, beat him and left him unconscious at the side of the road.

Prince Georges County police and the provost marshal at Bolling Field yesterday sought two white men—one described as between 30 and 35 years old, 5 feet, 10 inches tall, fairly heavy build, wearing brown clothing—possibly Army issue.

The second man was described as about 22 years old, 5 feet, 10 inches tall, slender, wearing tan trousers and an Army field jacket.

Man Threatened to Kill Meyrovitch, Woman Says; Two Others Questioned

Resident of Section Says Cab Driver Overheard Remark

Two Negro women were being held at the Women's Bureau last night for questioning in connection with the Monday night murder of Meyer Meyrovitch, 39, in his grocery store at 90 O st. nw.

Police did not divulge what angle they were following in the questioning of the women.

However, it appeared that the first accepted theory that Meyrovitch was shot to death by a holdup bandit may have been discarded.

Threat Is Reported

A clew may have been provided in a conversation which took place following the slaying between a mother of 10 children who lives near the scene of the murder and a cab driver.

The mother was located yesterday by a reporter of The Washington Post. She said that she got into a cab in the neighborhood near the store and began talking about the murder with the driver. She said she remarked that it was "terrible" that the holdup man had killed Meyrovitch.

She said the cab driver replied that this hadn't been a holdup killing. She said he then related that he had overheard a man threaten to kill the grocer two weeks earlier.

Residents of Neighborhood

The two women being questioned last night are both residents of the neighborhood. They were taken to the Women's Bureau during the afternoon and booked for investigation.

Meanwhile, funeral services for the slain grocer were held yesterday at Danzansky's funeral home, 3501 14th st. nw. Attending were Meyrovitch's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Sol Taishoff, more than 100 friends and neighbors and 30 members of Samuel Gompers Masonic Lodge No. 45, of which Meyrovitch was a member. Burial was in Ohev Sholm Cemetery.

Victim Eulogized

The eulogy was delivered by Rabbi Zemach Green of Ohev Sholom Congregation. Describing Meyrovitch as a man loved by all who knew him and a man quick to respond to appeals of charity, Rabbi Green said the crime should bring the community the realization that such happenings can best be reduced by educating the underprivileged and doing away with slums.

"This crime," he said, "was the result of ignorance, poverty and bitterness."

A reporter of The Washington Post yesterday talked to two of the last persons to see the grocer before his death. They were a woman, who lives in a rooming house several doors from the store, and Henry Crouch, janitor at nearby Dunbar High School who discovered Meyrovitch's body.

Saw Two Men Nearby

The woman said she had been shopping and entered the store between 8 and 8:15 p. m. with a number of bundles. She said she purchased a carton of cigarettes and that when she left Meyrovitch bid her good night and opened the door for her.

On her way out, she now recalls, she saw two men near the store. She did not see their faces. One wore a black coat, the other a short brown coat.

Crouch said he first entered the store at 6:30 the night of the murder to return 42 empty pop bottles. He said he remarked to the storekeeper that indigestion was troubling him and that Meyrovitch suggested a bottle of Seven-Up and baking soda. Crouch said his indigestion became more painful later and he returned to the store at 8:15 p. m. to obtain the soda and Seven-Up. It was then that he found the grocer's body.

Police Congratulated

While detectives concentrated on the Meyrovitch slaying, congratulations poured into police headquarters for the fine police work represented in the capture of George Garner, 25, and his brother, Lawrence, 23, confessed killers of two cab drivers here last Friday night.

Attorney Louis Jongbloet announced that he had been retained by Edward J. Garner, father of the two boys, who lives at 1141 22nd st. nw, to defend them. Jongbloet said he visited the pair in the District Jail yesterday briefly but the visit was cut short when psychiatrists arrived to examine the boys. Jonbloet said he was unable to learn who had ordered the examination.

Major Robert J. Barrett, police superintendent, disclosed that two tipsters have qualified as claimants for the $600 reward money offered in the cab driver slayings. Each will receive $300 if the Garners are convicted.

Youth, 9, Crushed to Death Under Wheels of Transit Bus

ON A HAPPIER DAY—Joel Norwitz, 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Norwitz of 7422 Georgia ave. nw., pictured in this family portrait with his sister, Mary, 4, was killed yesterday under the wheels of a Capital Transit bus

A nine-year-old District boy was crushed to death at 4:30 p. m. yesterday under a heavily loaded Capital Transit bus.

The victim was Joel Norwitz, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Norwitz, of 7422 Georgia ave. nw., killed instantly as he ran out to play after practicing his piano lesson.

Police said the boy slid down an embankment and ran into the path of the bus on 13th st. Silver Spring, between Eastern and Georgia aves. Driver of the bus was Bernard Riddlemoser, 30, of 2520 14th st. nw., who was released on $500 bond on a technical charge of manslaughter.

A playmate, Terry Guckert, 11, of 7418 Georgia ave. nw., saw the boy struck and ran to her home screaming.

The father is in the wholesale drug business in Baltimore. They have one other child, Mary, 4.

Earlier in the day, a coroner's jury ordered Camillus H. Wells, 19, of 4931 Fitch pl. ne., held for Municipal Court in the traffic death of 9-year-old Harold Middleton.

The Middleton boy, of 4549 Dix st., was killed Saturday when the bicycle he was riding was struck by Wells' car. Police said the auto had faulty brakes.

Burned-Out Family Aided By Neighbors

Neighbors yesterday pitched in to collect contributions for the fire-scourged Mills family of Southeast Washington.

Four persons died, five others were burned or injured, and four escaped unhurt when fire gutted the family home, at 1411 Alabama ave. se., at 3 a. m. Tuesday.

With four members of the family still hospitalized, five children were sheltered temporarily at the home of their uncle, James Mills, at 2600 Sheridan rd. se. The uncle, neighbors said, has his own family to care for and cannot long continue to take on the added burden.

A hastily formed committe of neighbors, headed by John H. Dale, is seeking funds, clothing and furniture contributions to make up the property loss. They asked that contributions be sent to Quarles Anacostia Pharmacy, 2433 Nichols ave. se., or to Radio Station WWDC, Connecticut ave. and K st. nw.

The mother, Mrs. Bernice Mills, 40, principal breadwinner for the 13 as a laundry worker at St. Elizabeths Hospital, was burned to death. Her husband, retired on meager disability pay as a former cook at the hospital, was still in critical condition last night at Casualty Hospital.

Civil Service Booklet Text Explains New Retirement Act

By Jerry Kluttz

The Washington Post today begins publication of the full text of the Civil Service booklet that explains in detail the new Langer-Chavez-Stevenson Retirment Act. The law affects in some way about 1,500,000 Government employes.

The booklet is eagerly sought by tens of thousands of Federal workers. More than 15,000 requests for it have been received by this writer. Each of them will be filled within the next week or 10 days.

Civil Service is overwhelmed by the demand for the booklet. It has the resources to print 50,000 copies, which it thought would be ample to fill the need. But it has had requests for upward of half a million copies. The individual written requests now on file for single copies will be filled, but Civil Service has been forced to turn down Treasury, Agriculture, Federal Security, Army and many other agencies that sought a copy for each of their employes.

Because of the enormous demand for the booklet and because many persons who are seeking it may be disappointed, The Washington Post is glad to publish the text in installments beginning today. We suggest that Federal workers clip and save this and the installments to follow and make a booklet for themselves.

JERRY KLUTTZ.

The New Retirement Act

THE LANGER-CHAVEZ-STEVENSON ACT changed some of the basic features of the original Retirement Act; it made some additions to the old system, and it also eliminated some of the former provisions.

The new law provides that for separations on or after the first of April, 1948, a minimum of five years of Federal civilian service is needed to qualify for any annuity benefits. Military service cannot be substituted for civilian work in connection with this minimum.

The new law increases the deductions from salary for retirement purposes from 5 per cent to 6 per cent, effective with the first pay period after June 30, 1948. Interest on deductions of active employes was lowered from 4 to 3 per cent as of the beginning of 1948.

Age Conditions Remain

THE NEW ACT did not change the conditions in connection with age and optional retirement after certain periods of service. These remain as before, briefly:

The employe must retire at age 70 if he has at least 15 years of service.

He may retire at age 60 with 30 years of service.

He may retire at age 62 with 15 years of service.

He may retire at age 55 with 30 years of service; in this case, however, his annuity will be scaled down from that which he would get if he were age 60, and, once set, does not change as time goes on.

An immediate annuity is available, under certain conditions, to employes who leave the Government after 25 years of service. This applies to a person who is separated through no fault of his own (in a reduction in force, for example).

As an illustration, an employe with 26 years of Federal service to his credit toward retirement is separated from the Government on account of a cut-back in personnel; he can get an immediate annuity regardless of his age at the time he is laid off.

A SOMEWHAT SIMILAR provision of law was in effect for a temporary period ending June 30 last year (the Porand Act). This portion of the new law was made retroactive to July 1, 1947.

The amount such a person receives will not be a full annuity if he is less than 60 years old. It will be scaled down at the rate of ¼ of 1 per cent per month (3 per cent per year) for each full month under 60 at the date of separation.

After April 1, there is but one age at which annuity starts for those people who work for the Government for at least five civilian years and then leave before reaching retirement age. That age is 62. In the past, anyone who earned the right to a future annuity by virtue of five years' employment could elect to start getting his annuity payments at either age 55 or 62, depending on whether he had been dropped involuntarily or resigned. Now, the reason for separation does not matter, and the discontinued service annuity, as we call it, starts at age 62.

In connection with this, the Langer- Chavez- Stevenson Act says that if a person serves at least 5 civilian years, but hasn't reached the 20-year mark, he has the choice of taking a refund of all the money to his credit in the Fund (including interest) or leaving it in the Fund for annuity purposes when he reaches age 62. If he takes the refund, he is out of luck so far as the annuity is concerned.

The Washington Post

REQUESTS BY THE THOUSANDS—Jerry Klutz, The Washington Post's Federal Diary columnist, is at a loss for elbow room. His desk is covered with more than 15,000 requests by readers for the booklet explaining the new Langer-Chavez-Stevenson Act which liberalizes the Civil Service retirement system

Disability Retirement

ONE MUST HAVE COMPLETED at least five years of civilian government service to be eligible for disability retirement, but in this case the annuity payments start immediately, regardless of age. There are two good points under the new law, and one which is not so favorable, so far as the disability annuitants are concerned.

First of all, a good point is that any employe who is undergoing hospital treatment when he is separated from his agency, or who is hospitalized at any time during the six months after his separation, can delay making his application for disability retirement for as long as six months after hospitalization ends. This is a break for those folks whose illness or incapacities prevent them from making their annuity arrangements with us right away.

With respect to those who join, or are already on, the disability rolls, it is no longer necessary for any of them to have annual physical examinations after they get to be 60 years old. Under the old system, such examinations could be ordered each year until the annuitant reached 70. The Government will save money on this new provisi .., and we won't bother these annuitants after age 60.

The one new feature of the act which is not so attractive with respect to the disability annuitants is this: Heretofore, when such an annuitant made a recovery, and became employable but was not able to obtain Federal employment, that person could be treated as having been involuntarily separated. His disability annuity stopped, and he then became eligible for reduced annuity benefits at age 55, or regular annuity at age 62. The new act takes away this age 55 provision; hereafter, if such an individual is unable to get Government employment he must wait until age 62 for the regular annuity to start.

ONE OF THE NICE THINGS about the 1948 act is the way it eases much of the figuring of the retirement income. There is now a simple basic formula which is used in computing the annuity of each person. This is it: When the person's average salary for his highest five consecutive years of Federal service is $5000 or more, we merely take 1½ per cent of that average and multiply by the total number of years of service. The product of that simple computation is the annuity.

If the person's five-year average salary is less than $5000, we take 1 per cent of it, add $25 to that, and then multiply by the total years of service. The result is the annuity which is payable to the former employe.

FORMULA—When best 5-year average salary is $5000 or more.

Take ½ per cent of salary	$ 90
Multiply by years of service	x30
Annuity	$2700

FORMULA—When best 5-year average salary is less than $5000

Example: Average is $4000; all service after August 1, 1920 is covered by deposits; 30 years of service.

Take 1 per cent of the salary	$ 40
Add $25	25
	65
Multiply by years of service	x30
Annuity	$1950

Baby Beaten to Death, Mother, 25, Arrested

Newark, N. J., March 4 (U.P.).—A 25-year-old mother was held by police today after a medical examiner said her 15-month-old son was beaten to death.

Area News in Brief

Probe for Racket 'Brain' Falls Flat

The quest was fruitless, but she "threw the book" at one defendant and let another off with a fine because he was "too old to go to jail."

Benjamin F. Cobb, 29, of 1611 11th st. nw., was sentenced to 30 days in jail and fined $50 on a guilty plea to possession of numbers slips.

Travis W. Wells, 68, of 28 P st. ne., was fined $50.

Both men, arrested in a filling station at 1411 N. Capitol st. Wednesday, refused to tell the name of their employer in the numbers-writing business; evaded Judge Raedy's questions with "I don't know."

She asked who would pay their fines; received an answer from their attorney, James K. Hughes, that he would pay them.

"Then who'll pay you?" Judge Raedy wanted to know.

Address Changes Asked

Arlington voters who have changed their address since they last registered are being urged to notify their precinct registrars, Bankhead Davies, Electoral Board secretary, said yesterday.

The move is designed to aid the board in converting the 11 old voting precincts into the 24 new units recently established by Circuit Court order. Failure of voters to furnish change-of-address information may jeopardize their right to vote, Davies said.

Recreation Board Named

A five-member recreation board has been appointed by the Rockville Town Council to plan and supervise the summer recreation program.

Members are Barnard T. Welsh, chairman, Adolph Gude jr., Mrs. Ormond Munger, Joseph J. Tarallo and Harold Packard. Appointment of the board was urged by the Rockville Civic Association.

Housewife 'Safe Driver'

Mrs. Nell Russell, a housewife of 1109 N. Pitt st., has been selected as Arlington's safe driver of the week, traffic safety officer Frank Palmer said yesterday.

He said Mrs. Russell had driven more than 100,000 miles without an accident during the past nine years.

Funds Urged For Start on Slum Program

A Senate Appropriations Subcommittee yesterday heard Federal and District officials appeal for funds for an early start on Washington slum clearance.

The witnesses asked that the subcommittee, headed by Senator Clyde M. Reed (R., Kans.), restore to the independent offices appropriation bill all the $3,461,500 for Washington slum clearance which the House knocked out.

Grant Among Witnesses

Among the witnesses were Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, whose agency is asking $61,500 for slum clearance planning, and officials of the District Redevelopment Land Agency. It has asked $3,400,000, mostly for buying land in the Barry Farms and Marshall Heights sections of Washington to start the slum clearance program.

Appearing for the land agency were Mark Lansburgh, chairman; Edward A. Dent, District tax assessor, and Richard R. Atkinson, members of the agency.

William H. Cary, jr., director of public health engineering for the District Health Department, said a survey of Marshall Heights showed 88 per cent of the dwellings need either major repairs, complete rehabilitation or demolition.

Cases Are Cited

Cary said one man built a house out of 52 discarded telephone booths. He said one family travels a block to toilet facilities and pays $1 a week to use them.

Senator Reed indicated he would be cool to the idea of providing the slum clearance funds. He said he knew of no other large city which is "less bedeviled with slums" than Washington. He said the witnesses would probably have to exercise their "persuasive powers" on the House.

Czech Coup Denounced at ADA Rally

The Communist seizure of power in Czechoslovakia was denounced as "a crime against world peace and democracy" at a rally last night of the Washington chapter, Americans for Democratic Action.

About 300 persons at the National Press Club auditorium authorized transmission of a message to President Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia pledging the help of American liberals in his fight to "regain democratic rights."

Congressmen, labor leaders and newspapermen joined the group in urging concerted action by Americans, "in words and deeds," to prevent the further spread of "Communist totalitarianism."

"Our course," declared Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), it should be to make clear to Congress that it must act on the Marshall Plan."

"The Marshall Plan," declared Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), "will NOT be enough." He called for control of "the instruments of mass destruction." Otherwise, he said, "America will go down and take the world down with her."

12-Bed Ward

Clinic Gets $60,000 for Cancer Study

The American Cancer Society yesterday announced a $50,000 grant to the Warwick Memorial Clinic for cancer research facilities, to be supplemented by a $10,000 allocation by the District of Columbia division of the society.

The Warwick Clinic, which will be moved from its present location at Garfield Hospital to the old George Washington University Hospital, will conduct a 10-point program of research with the funds made available, Dr. Calvin T. Klopp, medical director, said yesterday.

Affiliation with GW will permit the clinic to combine research and clinical facilities under one roof, he explained, and one of the new facilities will be a 12-bed research ward for cancer patients, whose cases will be studied.

Cost Borne by Clinic

These are the first such cancer beds in the District, and the cost of treatment, amounting to about $16 a day per patient, will be borne by the clinic, Dr. Klopp said.

Douglas Poteat, executive vice president of the Cancer Society, said fewer than 100 beds for such research and treatment were available in the United States because of the high cost of necessary equipment used and the technicians required to operate the ward.

Three of the most important parts of the Warwick Clinic program will be the study of similarities between aging cells of the human body and cancer cells, detection of cancer through smears and washes in the stomach, lungs, kidneys and other organs, and the testing of more than 100 antibiotic drugs for effectiveness against cancer.

Dr. Warren Andrew, associate professor of anatomy at George Washington, will conduct the research on these sections of the program, with Dr. Monroe J. Romansky, GW associate clinical professor of medicine, also working on the antibiotics study.

To Test Drugs Used

Drugs that have proved effective against cancer tissue in test tubes will be tested on animals, which will be used to study changes in body functions after surgical operations similar to those performed for cancer.

The Warwick Memorial Clinic will also try to determine whether between cancer and a low Vitamin A level in the blood. Dr. Kloop explained that about 87 per cent of cancer patients in a 1939 study were found to have less of that vitamin in the blood than normal persons.

Other studies will attempt to determine the metabolic effects of nitrogen mustards used in treating cancer-like conditions on the body functions; the metabolism of hemoglobin, as traced with isotopes, and the effect of hormones on certain types of cancer.

City to Open Clinic At Gallinger Monday

Dr. Jay McLean, director of the Bureau of Cancer Control, said advance examination of a few persons during the past two weeks has smoothed out problems connected with full-time operation.

Appointments for examination at the clinic may be made by calling NAtional 6000, exension 2697, he said.

Information Freedom Conference Held Here

By The Associated Press

A conference was held at the State Department yesterday on ways to promote world-wide freedom of information—and one of the sessions was held "off the record."

"Off the record" means that newsmen are not free to report for publication what is said.

Asked to explain, State Department officials said representatives were present from such organizations as the American Bar Association, the American Legion and the American Association of University Women.

On some of the issues involved, the officials added, such organizations have not taken an official stand, and hence their representatives could not commit them.

New Health Insurance Plan Starts April 1

A new Group Hospitalization insurance plan to cover doctors' fees in surgery and maternity cases will be in operation by April 1.

The new plan will be administered by the Medical Service of the District of Columbia, a nonprofit organization associated with Group Hospitalization.

Dr. Frank D. Costenbader, president of Medical Service, and Joseph H. Himes, president of Group Hospitalization, Inc., said enrollment will begin immediately.

New Insurance Limited

The new insurance, available only to GH subscribers, is also limited to those who are in sound health and under 65 years of age.

The Medical Service plan is sponsored by GH and the District Medical Society. More than 750 doctors, three quarters of whom are surgeons or obstetricians, will participate.

The new service provides "benefits for surgery, including fractures and dislocated joints, and obstetrics." If an eligible participant is hospitalized, the plan also covers X-rays, clinical laboratory examinations and anesthetics.

Costs Are Outlined

Full expenses will be paid for individual subscribers whose income is not more than $2500 a year, and for families whose income is not more than $4500 a year. Those exceeding these limits will pay the difference between what the doctor would charge them if they were not subscribers, and the amounts allowed under a schedule of fees.

Examples of the schedule are $85 for appendectomy, $75 for pregnancy with normal delivery, $50 for tonsillectomy with local anesthesia, and $10 to $35 for administration of anesthetics.

Rates for medical service will be 80 cents a month for an individual subscriber, $1.70 for husband and wife and $2 for a family, each in addition to the rates for the GH hospital service. Obstetrical care is provided only after a husband-wife or family membership has been held for 10 months.

Witness Surprises

Abortion Case Prosecution Hits Snag

The Government's case against Dr. Henry L. Peckham, jr., Washington physician charged with performing illegal operations on a 37-year-old Washington woman yesterday struck a snag virtually as soon as the trial got under way.

Prosecutor Charles Murray was surprised when his star witness, James P. Fox, a cab driver of 233 Kentucky ave. se., testified that Dr. Peckham was not the physician with whom he had dealt as go-between in the abortion deal.

Peckham, who was acquitted with Attorney James J. Laughlin a month ago on charges of performing an abortion on the lawyer's former sweetheart, is charged this time with performing the same type of operation on Mrs. Hubert Stottlemyer in his office, 428 8th st. se., last January 3, and again at the Stottlemyers' former residence, 240 Van Buren st. nw., January 5.

House Group Meets On Armory Today

Representative Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.) has called an executive meeting of his House subcommittee today to discuss control over nonmilitary uses of the District National Guard Armory.

District, Washington Board of Trade and Guard officials are to attend. The meeting will start at 10:30 a. m. in the House District Committee Room, 445 Old House Office Building.

Oldest Inhabitants Exclude Nonresidents as Members

The Society of Oldest Inhabitants last night, in effect, rejected a proposal which would have admitted residents of nearby counties to membership.

The association met at the Old Union Fire House, 19th and H sts. nw.

Following discussion as to whether the proposed constitutional amendment would admit to membership metropolitan area residents who had never lived in Washington itself, the amendment was withdrawn by its author, Charles Bates. A committee reported unfavorably on the amendment.

The group took no action on a proposed amendment of the Federation of Citizens Association, permitting the federation to rule on eligibility of its delegates. Speakers against the proposal expressed belief the federation should have no right of selection of delegates sent to it.

The group instructed its secretary to write a letter to Maj. Robert J. Barrett commending the police department on its quick apprehension of the confessed killers of two taxi drivers.

Corning Calls For Teacher Pay Raises

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

A cost of living pay raise for teachers equal to whatever may be granted Federal employes was advocated yesterday by Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning.

Dr. Corning told the Board of Education that he opposed a bill now before Congress that would grant teachers an annual pay raise of $1000.

The board at its semimonthly meeting requested the Corporation Counsel to appeal a District Court decision which exempted 38 nonresident students attending Woodrow Wilson High School from paying tuition.

The court ruled that the students would not have to pay because they registered for classes on or before July 25th, effective date of the 1948 Appropriations Act which ended free schooling for out-of-town pupils.

Board Member Adelbert W. Lee said that he doubted the wisdom of asking for more money for teachers "at a time when the District is having difficulty finding revenue to meet its budget."

Board President Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle referred Corning's recommendation to the board's committees on personnel and legislation and directed them to hold open hearings at which teachers will be permitted to express their views.

In other actions yesterday the board:

Promoted Mrs. Louis A. Chadwick, 6301 16th st. nw., teacher of commercial subjects at Paul Junior High School, to assistant principal of Eliot Junior High School.

Scheduled the annual cadet competitive drill for May 19 and 20 for the Negro schools and May 25 and 26 for the white schools.

Accepted the gift of a strip of land from the National Parks Service for a playground at the Beers School, Alabama ave. and 36th pl. se.

Rain or Snow This Morning, Cloudy Later

Today will be rainy in the morning with some snow possibly mixed in, the weatherman predicted last night. This afternoon will be cloudy.

His prediction for tomorrow called for some snow or rain with temperatures in the high 30s. Yesterday's temperatures fluctuated between a high of 54 degrees at 1:25 p. m. and a low of 34 at 6:56 a. m.

Nationally, the northern snowstorm dwindled to flurries yesterday while drenching rains moved through the South. Up to 12 inches of snow were deposited by the storm which moved from the Central States to New England. The rains swept up from the Gulf States through parts of the Carolinas, Tennessee and Kentucky.

Women Voters List Alexandria Health Needs

The Alexandria League of Women Voters yesterday listed the following as health needs in Alexandria and said it would seek action from the City Council:

1. Higher salaries in Health Department to attract and keep qualified personnel.
2. Maternal and child welfare program in the Health Department.
3. Organized diphtheria immunization program.
4. Greater use of diagnostic X-ray facilities for tuberculosis in Health Department.
5. Mass tuberculosis X-ray survey. (This was killed by the Council's finance committee.)
6. Steps to alleviate the serious financial plight of Alexandria Hospital.

G. W. and Maryland Defeated in Southern Tourney

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, Fla., March 4.—One of Walter Masterson's best pitches is the fast ball he delivers exactly 90 feet wide of the plate and with it picks an unsuspecting victim off first base. He snuffed out nine base runners with that little stratagem last season and that is a considerable number in the pick-off department. In fact, it was tops in the league.

POVICH

Masterson won't attain that figure again because the league is now too well alerted to his skill at the business and base runners won't inch off the bag too far. It's nice for a pitcher to hold that kind of respect in the league. When the base runners are worrying about a pitcher instead of vice versa, it is the ideal state of affairs for the man on the mound.

They're not going to get that big jump and steal a base on him to be sure, but equally as important to the pitcher with a good move to first is the fact that they don't dare to take a big lead. Then they aren't running, and they don't get down to second base fast enough on an infield ball to upset the shortstop or second baseman or otherwise break up a double play. The infielders like to work behind a pitcher like Masterson.

IT'S A SPECIAL sort of skill that not many of the league's pitchers can boast. There have been great pitchers who never did develop a good, fast deceptive move to first. Masterson's art is something rare because he is a right hander who has to take nearly a full twist to get the ball over to first base, in contrast to the left hander who can pump the ball to first and has the advantage of always having an eye on the runner.

There is a better pick-off man in the league than Masterson, but he hasn't set any records as yet because he's not as effective throwing to the plate as he is to first. He's Bill Wight, the rookie who was traded by the Yankees to the White Sox last week. Wight is a left hander with a lightning flip to first, but he hasn't made good as a pitcher otherwise.

The rules demand that a pitcher step off the rubber and take a step toward first base while attempting to pick a runner off. Otherwise, if he steps toward the plate and throws to first, it's a balk. Those rules weren't in effect back around 1906 when Nick Altrock walked seven men in one game and picked them all off first base with a delivery that started as a phoney throw to the plate.

IT'S KIND of a jitterbug step that Masterson uses to get the desired effects and get his body turned around in a twinkling as he makes the throw to first base. In contrast to the pitchers who stride toward first with one foot. Masterson does a quick little jig that moves both feet toward the bag and gets him in throwing position. It's pure jitterbug by a pitcher who in his youth actually won jitterbug contests in his native Philadelphia.

Masterson admits that his effective move to first base is something of a steal from Ted Lyons, the old White Sox right hander, who used the same kind of a double jump off the rubber. Lyons was a master at holding runners on the bag, and Masterson studied his technique closely before attempting it himself.

They do say that now Masterson is a better guy at the job of picking a runner off than Lyons was. During his three years in the service when pitching for Navy teams he perfected the move. On his first Western trip last season he picked four men off bases. In the Nats' last 120 games he picked only five men off because the word had gotten around that no liberties were to be taken with the tall fellow who pitched from behind smoked glasses.

THAT WAS ANOTHER factor in Masterson's favor, those dark glasses. The base runner was never sure when Masterson was putting the glimmers on him. They could only watch the movements of his feet for any intention to throw to first, and in Masterson's case that was small evidence because there was no tell-tale movement of one foot before he threw. When he did go into his act with both feet, the ball was on its way.

Old Sam Jones is revered as the best of the pitchers at holding a runner close to the bag. His fame was such that he rarely had to make a throw to first, because base runners held his ability in such respect they always hugged the bag when he was on the mound.

Alvin Crowder was another who wasted little energy making throws to first base, yet never permitted a runner to get a big lead. He always explained it by saying "there's no need for me to throw to first, those runners know I'll pick 'em off if they get too far off the bag, and they stay close. All I do is cock my head the same way whenever I'm ready to pitch, and if I can see the man on first out of the corner of my eye I don't bother with him. If I can't see him, I know he's too far off, and he's mine."

American Wins; C. U. Eliminated

BULLETIN

Baltimore, March 4.—Top-seeded Loyola of Baltimore defeated Mount St. Mary's, 73-69, after two overtimes in a first-round game of the Mason-Dixon Conference tourney here tonight.

Baltimore, March 4.—American University easily defeated Towson (Md.) State Teachers, 57-28, but Catholic U was eliminated by Randolph-Macon, 54-51, in the first round of the Mason-Dixon Conference tournament here today.

American U. faces Randolph-Macon tomorrow at 7:45 p. m. in the semifinals. The championship game is slated for Saturday.

Catholic U. trailed throughout the first half against Randolph-Macon. The Cards tied it up at 26-all early in the second half on a set shot by Gene Szklarz. Randolup-Macon immediately recaptured the lead, and built it up to 11 points when with two minutes left, the Cardinals staged a belated rally.

Cranston was Catholic U.'s leading scorer with 19 points. Roland Bodtke, Sam Noel and Dave Garber, the latter an Arlington, Va., boy, led the winners with 12, 10 and 8 points.

The American University Eagles had an easy time against Towson as they rolled up a 22-4 lead in the first eight minutes. The Eagle reserves then poured in and finished out the game.

Tex Griffin and Bob Lamon, who played only about 10 minutes each, took scoring honors for American U. with 14 and 11 points. George Kimmett paced the Teachers with 12.

Georgia Tech, Tulane Win

Tech upset fourth-seeded Alabama, 46-34. Second-seeded Tulane escaped the same fate by battling from behind to win, 47-40, over Auburn.

Auburn surged to the front early, prevailing, 14-3, after 10 minutes and 20-14, at the half, but the Greenies outlasted the Tigers in a hard fought second half.

Montgomery J. C. Wins in Overtime

Montgomery Junior College staged a seven-point rally in a three-minute overtime period to defeat the George Washington University Jayvees, 41-37, last night at Bethesda-Chevy Chase High gym.

After trailing, 28-17, at halftime, G. W. rallied to tie the score, 34-34, at the end of regulation time. But Bernie Wolf scored three points and Jack Crichton got four to give Montgomery its twelfth win in 18 games.

Gil Coan Sure Thompson Can Win for Nats

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., March 4.—Outfielder Gil Coan, who as yet hasn't made good himself on the Washington ball club, today checked in with a recommendation for Forrest Thompson, left handed pitcher late of Atlanta who is on trial with the Nats.

"This club won't have to worry about left handed relief pitching and they could even use him as a starting pitcher with no worries," said Coan of Thompson, who won 16 games and lost 13 for Atlanta last season.

"I saw a lot of him last year and he's a good one."

Thompson is no green pea. He's coming up to the majors at the age of 30. Physically he doesn't look much like a pitcher, or even an athlete. He's short and chunky and as easy to step over as walk around, but Coan goes all the way down the line for him.

Praises Thompson

"Thompson showed me more stuff in the Southern Association the last two years than I saw when I was facing big league pitching," said Coan.

"He has everything to win with, a fast ball, a curve and control that is wonderful for a left hander."

Manager Joe Kuhel is giving Thompson a long and interesting look, but unfortunately the pitching department is not where his Washington club is weak.

He'll carry about 13 pitchers north after the club breaks camp here and Thompson will be one of them, but he does not quite figure to break into the starting brigade.

At this point, Kuhel is happy to string along with five starters, Early Wynn, Walter Masterson, Sid Hudson, Mickey Haefner and Ray Scarborough. He has righthanded relief pitching in the tried and proven Tom Ferrick, and bidding for a regular job also are the veterans Milo Candini and Chico Pieretti.

Kuhel held a special batting drill for his pitchers today on the theory that if they can't hit they can at least bunt. He's trying to teach his hurlers how to push and drag

Gabriel's Central Carolers

Cards Pay Musial $31,000; Dyer Struck by Batted Ball

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 4 (AP).—Manager Eddie Dyer of St. Louis was resting comfortably today after narrowly escaping serious injury when struck in the head a batted ball in the Cardinals' morning workout at their spring training camp.

The accident occurred minutes after holdout Stan Musial, the Redbirds' sugging firstbaseman, came to terms with President Robert E. Hannegan.

After he was revived and carried to the clubhouse, Dyer was rushed to the hospital where X-ray pictpres showed no fracture of the skull. His condition was described as "good."

Remains Overnight

Dr. John B. Matthews, the attending physician, announced the Card pilot would remain in the hospital overnight for observation. The injury was officially diagnosed as a "slight concussion."

Unless unforeseen complications develop, he will be released tomorrow morning. However, he will not resume his duties on the field for several days.

It took Hannegan and Musial only 15 minutes to come to terms. No figures were announced but it was learned that the contract called for $31,000, the same sum Musial received last year.

However, Stan was promised he would be given a "substantial raise" if he had a "good year" in 1948.

Hannegan Aids

The pair left the hotel and headed for the park to acquaint Dyer with the glad tidings. They arrived just in time to help carry the manager off the field into the dressing room. Hannegan accompanied Dyer to the hospital.

The accident occurred as Dyer was standing in short left field directing the workout. Vernon Rapp, a minor league catcher, working out with the Cards, was batting fungoes to the outfield and accidentally hit a line drive directly at Dyer.

Brown's Partee Signs

San Bernardino, Calif., March 4 (AP).—Catcher Roy Partee, obtained from the Boston Red Sox, came to terms with the St. Louis Browns today. Six Brownies still are unsigned.

Jackie Robinson Reports

Ciudad Trujillo, March 4 (AP).—Jackie Robinson, 15 pounds over his normal weight, arrived in camp today and took part in the regular Brooklyn Dodgers' drill.

Robinson appeared to have retained his batting eye, despite the winter tour of nightly banquets and bentfits. In his first appearance at the plate since the world series, he lined three pitches to deep left center. He spent the rest of his time scooping up grounders at first base.

Manager Leo Durocher announced the Dodgers would play an intra-squad game Saturday. The squad will be divided into the all-stars of Jake Pitler and Ray Blades.

Two Philly Casualties

Clearwater, Fla., March 4 (AP).—The Philadelphia Phillies came up with two training camp casualties today when Roy Cullenbine and Curt Simmons were injured.

Cullenbine, recently acquired from the Detroit Tigers, suffered a badly twisted neck when his car collided with another automobile while driving to the ball park. Simmons, promising rookie southpaw hurler, slipped on the wet turf and pulled a tendon in his left ankle.

Hoyas Beaten By Villanova

Villanova, Pa., March 4.—Villanova's two big siege guns; Paul Arizen and Brooks Ricca, proved too much for Georgetown here tonight as the Hoyas bowed to the Wildcats, 71-56.

Only Danny Kraus could hit with any consistency for Georgetown. He scored 13 points. Between them, Arizen and Ricca piled up 41 of Villanova's total.

Ricca pushed the Wildcats to a fast 6-0 lead, hagging two field goals and two fouls. With Kraus, Eddie Brembs and Ray Corley leading the way, Elmer Ripley's men tied it at 10-all and then 12-all before Villanova pulled away to a 38-28 halftime margin.

The game, roughly played at times, was the season's finale for both squads. The loss was the 15th for Georgetown against 12 victories. Villanova, avenging an earlier 64-46 setback at Washington, brought its 1947-1948 ledger to 14 won and 9 lost.

The Secret's Out—Central Has 'Harmony'

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Their "big secret" began to leak out in the dressing room after the Central Vikings won the interhigh basketball championship at the Armory last Friday night.

We had gone down to congratuate Central Coach Gabe Ferazzi when our attention was drawn to a corner of the room. A large group of Central rooters, clapping hands in rhythm, were gathered around what we thought was a phonograph playing hot spiritual music.

Curious about a phonograph in a basketball team's dressing room, we sauntered over.

It Was No Phonograph

What we found was not a phonograph but the Central team, in the cluster of rooters, harmonizing on a favorite barbershop quartet number, "Roll Dem Bones."

It was no wonder that they'd attracted such a crowd. They sounded good to us—so good, that we thought they ought to get a chance on the radio or television.

We came back to the office and told the boss about it. He said it might be a good idea to get a picture of the boys singing.

We spoke with Ferazzi and arranged the picture, adding that we were negotiating to get the boys a television audition.

Ferazzi chuckled, "You're too late; most of the boys have been singing every Saturday afternoon on WNBC television station for the past three months as part of an octet known as the 'Hilltoppers.'

Afraid of Ribbing

"They haven't let anybody know that they are the Central Basketball Team because they've been afraid some of the other teams might find out and give them a good riding," said Ferazzi.

The octet is led by Jimmy Pantos and Bobby Johnson, who finished as the fourth and eighth ranking interhigh scorers. It was organized by the Central music department. The name, "Hilltoppers," was derived from the fact that Central is located at the top of one of the steepest hills in the city.

The rugged Pantos sings a polished second tenor. Johnson, who was All-High shortstop on the Central Baseball Team last year, shifts over to second bass with the "Hilltoppers."

"Not at all," says the coach. "A group of boys who harmonize well off the basketball court are apt to harmonize in a game. Besides, they sound darn good to me."

Duke Ousts Colonials; Terps Bow To Davidson

BULLETIN

Durham, N. C., March 4.—Duke eliminated George Washington from the Southern Conference tourney here tonight, 54-51.

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Durham, N. C., March 4.—Maryland bowed in and out of the Southern Conference Basket Tournament, a 58-51 victim of Davidson College, this afternoon before 7000 spectators.

Sidelined along with the Terrapins in this afternoon's quarter-final play were the Virginia Tech Gobblers, drubbed, 61-40, by North Carolina.

North Carolina State, defending champions, swept by William and Mary, 73-52, in the opener of tonight's twin bill.

It was the thirteenth straight conference win for the Wolfpack who are unbeaten in league play this year. They meet North Carolina in tomorrow night's semi-final.

W. & M. made it close for the first half, trailing by only 22-17, but after that the Red Terrors of Raleigh almost ran the Indians back to their Williamsburg, Va., reservation.

Although it never led in the late skirmishing, Maryland was very much in the game until the final three minutes. That's when Davidson asserted its superior shooting ability and wrapped up the decision.

Terps Tie Score at 45-45

Trailing 29-26 at halftime, the Terps charged back to tie the game at 45-45 with seven minutes to go. At this juncture, Davidson's all-conference forward, slender, dead-eye George Cheek, arched in a one-hander, followed that up with a free throw seconds later and the Wildcats were in front to stay.

Maryland kept within 3 points of its opponents until the three-minute mark, but the Old Liners simply couldn't get over the hump Davidson, on the other hand, added four more points just for insurance.

Cheek, a 6-3 junior from Selma, Ala., was the lad who knocked the Terps out of the sixteenth annual show. He got 21 points and most of the rebounds.

The Wildcats came perilously close to losing him, with the issue still very much in doubt. He committed his fourth personal foul with five minutes left to play, but managed to hang on for the balance of the struggle without another infraction.

Vaudeville Still Alive—at Armory Show

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

BEFORE I BORROWED my big brother's long pants, tried to impersonate a tired business man and saw my first burlesque, my chief theatrical interest was in vaudeville.

Haight

My boyhood ambition, next to mascot for the Nats, was to get the job of placing the pasteboard signs announcing the various acts—signs reading, "Hobart's Dancing Ponies" — "Salvatora, Magician Extraordinary" "The Whirligigs, Hot From Broadway."

Every show included one act for the intelligensia perhaps a tightly corseted babe with four-octave voice or some guy who just returned after playing Hamlet for eight years on the continent—and looked it.

By concentrating on peanuts and hard candies, I weathered these humps. I went for most other acts in a big way—comedians, acrobats, dancers, etc., although I was only lukewarm toward trained pigeons.

Tops with me were dog acts, especially the one in which fox terriers worked a tread mill that turned a merry-go-round peopled with nattily dressed men and women with tails.

Long before vaudeville hit the skids, theater men tell me, dog acts went out. Variety Magazine carried many work wanted ads on them, including the famous, "Trick Dog Seeks Job—Has Tuxedo."

Yes, vaudeville is dead, theatrically speaking. But is it really dead? The answer is no.

THE BIGGEST vaudeville show of all-time is one of the features of All-American Sportsmen's Show opening today at the Armory. Some 14 acts, ranging from trick archery shooting to water balleting (with glamorous mermaids)—all these, plus a dog act.

Tom Dolan, who beats the publicity drums for the big show, must have seen the love light in my eyes when, in describing various acts, he mentioned "Frank's Retrievers."

According to Tom (and whoever heard of a lying publicity man), these are the finest trained bird dogs in the country. The Golden Retrievers and Springer Spaniels operate in and around a 70-foot tank and are so thoroughly obedient that they probably would lap up every drop of water, if so commanded.

Dolan tells me a live duck is placed in the far end of the pool. A dog is ordered to retrieve the bird. He dashes along the side of the tank, jumps in the water, has his mouth open and then, on command, he halts—a foot from the duck!

They do a long list of equally amazing performances, including a three-way race to mouth the ducks and return to the stand.

FURTHERMORE, Tom says, the dogs are so gentle with their grip that not a duck has been injured. He maintains that, like the dogs, the ducks seem to like the act. At that, it's probably more fun being a "house duck" than getting caught in the ice in some creek or dying in bunker oil in the upper bay.

Speaking of dog tricks, reminds me of the time I was at the Snell home in Takoma Park interviewing Daughter Dorothy, the star figure skater. Their big spaniel was stretched out in front of the fireplace. During the conversation, he arose, sauntered toward the kitchen and returned to lay a can of dog food in my lap—or my facsimile thereof.

"He is," she replied and then, addressing the dog, said, "Get a log for the fire, Mike."

He disappeared. Soon there was a bumping noise from the cellar steps and Mike came into view dragging a big log.

Don't you know, to this day, I've wondered if that dog carried out the ashes.

Jean Borotra Returns for Indoor Event

New York, March 4 (AP).—Jean Borotra, France's once-famed "Bounding Basque," is going to take another swing at the U. S. indoor tennis championship he held fiur times in the years between two world wars.

This was announced today by the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association, which disclosed that the national indoor tournament, opening here March 11, once again will have a distinct international flavor.

Borotra first captured the U. S. indoor singles crown in 1925. He lost it to Rene Lacoste of France in the finals the following year but regained it in 1927 and won again in 1929 and in 1931. He also shared the doubles title in 1925, 1927 and 1931.

Pros Expand Tour

Spokane, March 4 (AP).—Jack Kramer and Bobby Riggs will expand their current professional tennis tour into a Globe-trotting jaunt to last until May, 1949, Promoter Jack Harris said today.

Riggs defeated Kramer, 2-6, 9-7, 6-3, here for his first victory in 12 matches. The score now is 25 matches for Kramer and 16 for Riggs.

Gus Gives Challenger 2d Chance

By Jack Hand

New York, March 4 (AP).—Durable Gus Lesnevich, the missing link in Billy Fox's knockout string, gives the Philadelphia challenger another shot at his light heavyweight title tomorrow.

Right now it's about 8 to 5 that Billy will fall again.

Only once in 51 fights has Fox failed to stop an opponent. That once was February 28, 1947, when he was flattened by Lesnevich in the tenth round of a championship bout.

Events since have not convinced the boxing mob that the 22-year-old kayo artist will do better. Granted he has belted over seven more men, including Jake Lamotta in an eyebrow-raising performance that prompted an investigation. But Gus has shown no signs of slipping.

Pressed to Make Weight

At 32 or 33, depending on whether you listen to Manager Joe Vella or the boxing records, Lesnevich is punching better than ever before.

The Cliffside Park, N. J., husky was a capable fighter in prewar days when he marched to the title with 14 knockouts in 64 bouts. Since his discharge from the Coast Guard, he has stopped five of eight opponents.

It no longer is an easy task for Gus to make the 175-pound limit. He zooms up to 200 between fights and just managed to make it this a light heavy although Ezzard are this may be his last bout as time with a struggle. Chances Charles of Cincinnati also wants a crack at his crown.

Sol Strauss, acting promoter of the 20th Century Sporting Club, thinks the return will draw 18,000 and about $125,000 into Madison Square Garden. Their first fight attracted 18,318 and $102,520. This time it's for $20 tops.

Gus' Fourth Defense

For the record, it might be a good idea to recall that Fox had Lesnevich in trouble in the third round of their first meeting. Using his ring craft and experience to good advantage, Gus weathered the storm.

Fox rushed through the likes of Tony Gillo, Billy Cooper, Agostino Guedes, Artie Levine and George Kochan in his "comeback." When he stopped Lamotta in the fourth, November 14, the New York State Athletic Commission called for an investigation. Purses were held up for a month but finally were paid.

Lamotta later was suspended until June and fined $1000 for failing to report an injury prior to the fight.

This will be Lesnevich's fourth title defense. He won the NBA crown by defeating Anton Christoforidis and later gained world recognition by disposing of Tami Mauriello, both in 1941.

G.W., W.-L. Picked 1-2

Alexandria, Arlington Highs Favored in Virginia Track

George Washington of Alexandria and Washington-Lee of Arlington are favored to take the top two berths in Saturday's University of Virginia State indoor interscholastic track meet at Charlottesville.

The big question is which of the two will finish first in the field that includes eight high schools and two prep schools.

Last week at Chapel Hill, N. C., G. W. took first and W.-L. second in the North carolina U. invitational.

Washington-Lee is conceded a better chance this week because the Virginia meet includes pole vault and shotput events, which were omitted at North Carolina.

The Arlington school has one of the strongest vaulters in the State in 5-foot, 6-inch Douglas Minnick, who has leaped as high as 11 feet, 4 inches. W.-L. also has a strong trio of shot tossers in Rollo Thompson, Jack Sievers and Rex Johnson.

Other W.-L. entries are Johnson, Minnick and Bill Corish in the high jump; Malcolm Byrd, Johnson and Bob Calvert in the 50-yard sprint. Don Dick, Joe Vallardi and Mark Lewis in the half-mile.

Stan Bilheimer and Andy Blanch will race for W.-L. in the high hurdles; Eddie Fowler, Tom Hilton and Chuck Thomason in the 440; Roy McDaniels, Jay Hughitt and Bob Mutchler in the mile; Jim Howie, Blanch and Dwight Scott in the low hurdles; and Fowler, Johnson, Hilton, Byrd and Thomason in the mile relay.

G. W.'s chief hopeful is Bobby Jones, who lowered the North Carolina 1000-yard record last week to 2:17.4 and this week concentrates on the Virginia indoor half mile mark. Other G. W. half-milers, who are entered are Tom Williams and Allen Brown.

The Alexandria school will be represented in the 50-yard sprint by Bob Hanna, John Hughes and Ed Johnson; in the low hurdles by Jerry Perry and Keith McDonald; in the high hurdles by McDonald, and in the 440 by Johnson, Mike Davis and Art Levinson.

Stuart Anderson, Art Williams and Tom Miller have been entered by G. W. in the mile. Jeff MacTiernan and Francis Kavaljin in the pole vault; Bill Dudrow in the high jump; and Buck Packard, Cubby Dixon in the shot, and Hughes, Davis, Perry and Dean Cooksey in the mile relay.

Gil Coan High On Thompson

No Bunts for Wynn

In the case of Wynn, however, the bunting business was so much nonsense. Wynn continued to be the star of the batting drills, hitting the ball a long way to all fields against all types of pitching and switching to both sides of the plate as he wished. He still ranks as the club's No. 1 pinch-hitter.

Huhel has been impressed in these first days of training with the potentialities of a couple of other rookies besides Thompson . . . He like Joe Jones, the side-winding right hander who pitched in Orlando last season, and Dick Weik, who moves up from Chattanooga, plus Earl Dozier, rookie right hander . . . Dozier' resemblance to Walter Masterson, even down to the smoked glasses and the deliberate overhand delivery, is downright amazing . . . Joe Cambria is due from Havana today with a Cuban catcher who is supposed to be the best on the island. The club doesn't know his name as yet.

G. W. High Opponent Of Central

The St. John's Cadets, District Catholic champs, play Bethesda-Chevy Chase's Barons, Montgomery County titleholder, at 7:30. George Washington of Alexandria, northern Virginia champion, follows against Central, District interhigh titleholder.

The top-seeded Cadets gave the best performance of the first round teams. They solved a difficult Washington-Lee zone defense to win their twentieth straight game, 57-36.

The whirlwind passing of Vince Durkin, Billy Martins and Al Weaver so bewildered the W.-L. quint, that Cadets Jack George and Tom Fannon were able to net 28 points before they were removed at the end of the third quarter.

In an effort to stop the Cadets, Bethesda will probably vary its defense, and hopes to match the George-Fannon punch with Dick Latimer, Mike Bollo and Kenny Poerstel.

Tonight's second game between G. W. and Central brings together two of the most evenly matched teams in the area. They're already played played each other twice this season, and each has a 7-point win to its credit. Each has a 15-3 record.

In the first round, second-seeded G. W. defeated Maryland Park, 57-35, and Central turned back Gonzaga, 36-32. For G. W., Billy Rorer, Bill Smith and Jake Dohner were the big guns. Central's leaders were Hal Sponsler and Bob Johnson.

Redland Bowl Victory Still Aim of Chen

Three horses, prominent last year, compete again in tomorrow's Redland Hunt point-to-point races, scheduled to inaugurate the 1948 outdoor season in horse circles hereabouts. Chen, owned by T. T. Mott, jr., will be ridden as usual by Miss Judy Johnson in the Redland Bowl event.

Last year Chen came from behind to lose by a neck margin to Mrs. Crompton Smith's Snowy Night, which was killed in competition later in the season.

Mrs. Elizabeth Smith's Woodwind, in the winning pair of the Terpenning Cup race a year ago, goes postward again, teamed with the same owner's Wood Secret. Also returning to action will be Stanley Stabler's Happy Gal, who quit pulling a plow long enough to win the 1947 heavyweight race.

The program opens at 2 p. m. and the start and finish will be at the Martin Dairy Farm, located on the Olney pike (Georgia ave. extended), 12 miles from the traffic light at Silver Spring.

Entries for the Redland Bowl and Terpenning Cup, with riders, follow:

REDLAND BOWL—E. R. Jones' Cracked Lad (Artie Randle), Sally Rossel's Mystery Man (Miss Rossel), T. T. Mott, jr.'s Chen (Judy Johnson), Jake Blunt's Satan (Miss Blunt), Ramona Farm's Glochamorra (Lt. Edifice Offered to Park

THE OLD STONE HOUSE at Manassas, Va., which will become a part of Manassas Battlefield Park if legislation before the Virginia General Assembly is passed

Va. Bill Puts Manassas House, Survivor of Battle, Into Park

Manassas, Va., March 4 (Spl.).—A two-story stone house which stood through both battles of Manassas may become a part of Manassas Battlefield Park if legislation now before the General Assembly is passed.

Delegate Frank Moncure of Prince William and Stafford Counties has asked for an appropriations bill amendment to include $25,000 for purchase of the house, which was used as a hospital for both Union and Confederate soldiers.

The house was built about 1800 and has been occupied almost continuously since then, according to Major Joseph Mills Hanson, former park superintendent. Cannon balls and shells are imbedded in the 18-inch thick walls, he said, but the house is still one of the best preserved in the area. The landmark stands on 80 acres of ground adjacent to the park.

Mrs. Mary Ayres, widow of the last owner, occupies the house during much of the year, but she wishes to sell it to the park to settle her husband's estate. Appraisers have set its value at $50,000, according to Major Hanson, and the difference between that and the appropriation would be made up through funds available to the county and solititation of county residents.

Radio Stations Assert Right to Free Speech

By The Associated Press

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday heard contrary demands that radio broadcasting be strictly "policed" and that it be allowed to function "completely free."

The views were voiced at hearings on the FCC's 7-year-old ban on editorializing or side-taking by radio stations in elections or other public controversies.

Henry C. Fleisher, assistant publicity director for the CIO, plumped vigorously for keeping the ban. He said the CIO objected "to any move that would permit radio broadcasting stations to give editorial expression to their own corporate viewpoint."

"Some forms of nontechnical regulation are clearly necessary and desirable to protect the country's radio listeners," Fleisher said.

On the other hand, the Rev. Carl McIntire, secretary of the American Council of Christian Churches, told the commissioners:

"Radio should be as free as the press in every particular.

"It is in the public interest that the people of the community know where their radio stations stand, just as the public knows today where newspapers stand on various issues and problems."

The "policing" suggestion came from Angus McDonald, who read a statement by Russell Smith, legislative secretary of the National Farmers' Union.

Among other things, the statement Smith said was given to Henry Wallace when he obtained Mutual network facilities to announce his presidential candidacy. The program originated from the studios of WGN, Mutual affiliate in Chicago, owned by the Chicago Tribune, "but was not carried on the air by WGN itself," Smith said.

"Too many of our radio stations are owned by the Hearsts, the Colonel McCormicks and the Pews. Too few are owned by labor unions, cooperatives or farm organizations," the statement said.

M. S. Novik, radio consultant and executive secretary of the National Association of Educational Broadcasters, was another witness. He urged the commission "to spell out" what is meant when a broadcasting license is granted "in the public interest, convenience and necessity." He commented that some stations "seem to prefer Bing Crosby to public discussions."

President Erik Barnouw of the Radio Writers Guild said his organization strongly opposed any easing of the rule against editorializing by radio stations.

Petition Opposes Beer Application For Restaurant

An application for a permit to serve beer and light wines in a restaurant at 527 42d st. ne. was protested yesterday at a hearing before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

Theodore G. Miles, Mrs. Mary E. Saunders and Reginald Ramsey, who live in the same block as the restaurant, declared that granting of the permit would result in depreciation of their property and attract "undesirable persons" to the area. They also offered a petition protesting the grant signed by 27 persons.

The restaurant owners, Mrs. Helen H. Billups and Miss Viola G. Killgo, said they had been in business on the location for five years and were asking for the permit to meet requests by patrons for such beverages.

Two of their customers, James T. Tally of 534 47th st. ne., and Thomas L. Brown of 4203 Foote st. ne., said they had never noticed disorderly conduct in the establishment.

Higher Ceilings On Veterans' Pay Set by Conferees

They fixed ceilings of $210 a month for veterans with no dependents, $270 for those with one dependent and $290 for those with two or more.

The ceiling is on the combined income of the veteran. For example, a veteran with no dependents, who is paid less than $210 a month by his employer, would be entitled to a subsistence allowance from the Veterans Administration. However, his combined wages and allowance could not exceed $210.

Yesterday's agreement is subject to approval by both houses. Chairman Rogers (R., Mass.) of the House Veterans Affairs Committee said a House vote will be taken Monday. The legislation would go into effect April 1.

At present subsistence payments to on-the-job trainees could not exceed $65 a month for veterans having no dependents, and $90 for those with dependents.

Army to Probe Mystery Death Of Veteran Private

Aberdeen, Md., March 4 (AP).—Army officials today ordered an investigation into the mysterious death of Pfc. George F. Emes of Huntingdon, Pa., Purple Heart war veteran.

Emes died in his barracks at the Army's proving ground here yesterday. An Army spokesman said he had been on a pass Tuesday night and that two of his friends on the post reported receiving a telephone call from him saying he might be late because he was having "car trouble."

Maryland and Pennsylvania State police were asked to determine if Emes was involved in an accident Tuesday night, but police said no such accident had been reported.

Emes, attached to the 82d Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N. C., was taking an eight-week ordnance course here.

AMG Judge Assails MPs For Arrest

Frankfurt, March 4 (NYHT).—David B. Bernstein, American military government judge, today severely rebuked United States military police agents in the Frankfurt area for actions "reprehensible and having no support under the law."

In a decision in the Bachmann black market case, the Los Angeles justice denounced American and German police agents "for . . . finding the accused guilty of all charges and confiscating all of his properties" before the defendant was actually brought to trial.

Judge Bernstein's is the first public criticism of American military police methods voiced by a high American official attached to European command.

Robert Bachmann, former wealthy stock exchange operator in Germany and New York, was acquitted of all but five of eighteen charges brought against him. He received a six-month suspended sentence and a 15,000 Reichsmark fine.

Judge Bernstein accused American and German police agents of entering Bachmann's house and confiscating property without a search warrant, of denying Bachmann the services of a lawyer immediately after his arrest, of interrogating Bachmann who was "under duress," of placing the accused in solitary confinement without sufficient reason.

Seven Virginia Judges Elected by Assembly

Richmond, Va., March 4 (AP).—Democratic nominees for judgeships were elected today by the General Assembly without opposition.

Judge A. H. Hopkins of Rocky Mount, for an eight-year term as judge of the Thirtieth Circuit.

C. C. Quesenberry of Waynesboro, as judge of the newly created Corporation Court of Waynesboro.

The following were reelected to eight-year terms: Judge Herbert G. Smith of the Corporation Court of Newport News; Judge Hastkins Hobson of Law and Equity Court, Part II, Richmond; Judge M. Ray Doubles, Hustings Court, Part II, Richmond; Judge Dirk A. Kuyk, Huntings Court, Roanoke.

To date, Funk said, material valued at $65,000 has been removed from the demolished buildings. Cost of removal: $11,000.
